Despite the scorching heat, hundreds of vehicles and thousands of nonresident workers, their families, and supporters joined yesterday's motorcade and peaceful assembly to show strong support to the U.S. Department of the Interior's recommendation for improved immigration status for legal alien workers who have been residing in the CNMI for at least five years. See WORKERS on Page 4

Fitial to tell Congress: We do not support Interior recommendation

By HAIDEE V. EUGENIO

REPORTER

Gov. Benigno R. Fitial left for Washington, D.C. yesterday to personally deliver what his administration termed as a "unified" position: That the CNMI government does not support the U.S. Department of the Interior's report and recommendation on improved status for long-term alien workers.

Thousands of nonresident workers, their families and supporters crowd the American Memorial Park in Garapan after a motorcade that started in Susupe yesterday afternoon, to show support to the U.S. Department of the Interior's recommendation to grant long-term immigration status to nonresident workers in the CNMI, and to call on the U.S. Congress to immediately act on such recommendation. Inset shows a nonresident worker tying a yellow ribbon to a banner on top of his car.

Q&A USCIS to issue redesigned green card

The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services announced on May 12, 2010, that it has redesigned the Permanent Resident Card—commonly known as the “green card”—to incorporate several major new security features. Beginning today, USCIS will issue all green cards in the new, more secure format.

Q. What is a Permanent Resident Card, or “Green Card”?

A. A green card is proof of authorization to live and work in the United States on a permanent basis. It also is evidence of registration in accordance with U.S. immigration laws. Newly issued green cards are valid for ten years for lawful permanent residents and two years for conditional residents. The permanent resident must renew his or her card each time it expires.

Q. Why did USCIS redesign the Green Card?

A. The green card redesign is the latest advance in USCIS’ ongoing efforts to deter immigration fraud. State-of-the-art technology prevents counterfeiting, obstructs tampering, and facilitates quick and accurate authentication of the card. The enhanced features will better serve law enforcement, employers, and immigrants, all of whom look to the green card as definitive proof of authorization to live and work in the United States.

Q. What major improvements has USCIS included in the redesigned green card?

A. Secure optical media store biometrics for rapid and reliable identification of the card holder. Holographic images, laser engraved fingerprints, and high resolution micro-images make the card nearly impossible to reproduce. Tighter integration of the card design with personalized elements makes it difficult to alter the card if stolen. Radio Frequency Identification capability allows Customs and Border Protection officers at ports of entry to read the card from a distance and compare it immediately to file data. Finally, a preprinted return address enables the quick and easy return of a lost card to USCIS.

Q. Is the Permanent Resident Card actually green, as its nickname suggests?

A. After the redesign, the card is now colored green.

Q. Who will receive the redesigned green card?

A. Beginning May 11, 2010, USCIS will issue all green cards in the new, more secure format. Recipients of the redesigned card will include those newly approved for lawful permanent residency, as well as those who have sought a renewal or replacement card.

Q. What happens to existing green cards with the old design?

A. Some existing green cards bear an expiration date, and those cards will remain valid until they expire.

Holders of those cards will receive the redesigned version when seeking a renewal or replacement.

Other existing green cards have no expiration date, and those cards remain valid. USCIS recommends that holders of cards without an expiration date apply to replace their cards with the redesigned version.

The current cost of renewing or replacing a green card is $370. Additionally, eligible permanent residents may choose to explore becoming a naturalized U.S. citizen. For more information on eligibility for naturalization, go to www.uscis.gov/citizenship.

Q. How does a lawful permanent resident replace a green card, if lost or damaged?

A. A lawful permanent resident may seek a replacement card by filing a Form I-90, Application to Replace Permanent Resident Card. The Form I-90 and instructions are available online at <http://www.uscis.gov/forms>. If outside the United States, a lawful permanent resident should contact the nearest U.S. consulate, USCIS office, or U.S. port of entry before attempting to file a Form I-90.

‘Vexatious litigant’ stopped from further filings in suit vs two judges

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit has ruled that no filings will be entertained anymore in connection with “vexatious litigant” John Sablan Pangelinan’s $61.1 million lawsuit against two judges and several other persons.

The Ninth Circuit judges said no further filings shall be accepted in this closed case.

Pangelinan filed a petition for panel rehearing but the Ninth Circuit denied it.

The appellate court has issued an order that the court’s judgment entered March 10, 2010, “takes effect this date.”

In the March 10 order, the Ninth Circuit affirmed the U.S. District Court for the NMI’s ruling dismissing Pangelinan’s lawsuit.

The Ninth Circuit said U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge Frances M. Tydingco-Gatewood properly concluded that the judges were immune to the extent that they were sued for claims arising from their decisions in Pangelinan’s lawsuits.

The appellate court ruled that Tydingco-Gatewood properly concluded that the prosecutor was entitled to absolute immunity.

Pangelinan filed the $61.1 million lawsuit in January 2008 against then U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Alex R. Munson and district court designated judge David Wiseman. Pangelinan also named as co-defendants two lawyers, a federal prosecutor, an FBI agent, two federal probation officers, two U.S. Marshals, and seven other people.

In the lawsuit he filed pro se (without a lawyer), Pangelinan also sued 13 grand jurors and 12 jurors.

In her order issued in June 2008, Tydingco-Gatewood dismissed the lawsuit and declared Pangelinan a “vexatious litigant.” She prohibited Pangelinan from filing any lawsuit or documents in federal court that is related to a 1997 lawsuit filed against him.

The judge noted that the Commonwealth’s most active pro se litigant filed 18 appeals related to a 1997 court judgment that found him liable to pay $270,000. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Consultant recommends 128 pct. single hike for wastewater

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The consultant for the Commonwealth Public Utilities Commission disagreed with a proposal to implement an increase to the water rate next month, but recommended a single across-the-board rate hike for wastewater.

The Commonwealth Utilities Corp. petitioned the commission to approve a 95-percent rate increase for all wastewater rates effective June 1 this year and a second rate adjustment of 35 percent four months later.

Georgetown Consulting Group Inc., however, is recommending a better solution.

"We believe that the overall dollars raised by this request is reasonable under the circumstances. However, we recommend that both CUC and the CPUC consider implementing a single rate increase of two rate increases within four months," the consultant told the commission on its May 5 report.

The original CUC proposal will reflect 164 percent increase in October for all its waste water customers.

For instance, a customer charge of $8.20 per month at present will increase charge to $15.99 in June and eventually will become $21.59 per month in October 2010.

Moreover, under CUC's proposal, a residential or commercial customer paying minimum charge monthly of $8.20, the rate would become $18.72 in June and will stay the same in October.

Georgetown Consulting's recommendation, meanwhile, will mean a 128.3-percent rate increase beginning June 1 compared to CUC's proposal of 164 percent in two rate increases.

"While this increase is initially higher than the CUC proposed increase of 95 percent on June 1, the increase that would have been implemented in Oct. 1 would represent higher rates," the consultant stated.

Georgetown Consulting said that given that its proposed rates will be lower than the CUC proposal rates on that dates, it said the revenues collected in FY 2011 under its proposal will be less than the revenues that would be collected under the CUC proposal.

"The total revenue increase over the 16-month period is revenue neutral and is a matter of judgment under our proposal," it explained.

Saipan Tribune learned that under the CUC proposal of two rate increases, projected revenue for CUC is $2.9 million, while under the consultant's proposal of a single rate hike of 128 percent will bring revenue of only $2.4 million—or a difference of $474,000.

Georgetown Consulting, however, indicated that the single rate increase will produce more revenues in FY 2010.

In the same report to the commission, Georgetown Consulting said there is no need for CUC to implement an across-the-board water rate adjustment to all its customers because its financial problem could be addressed by equalizing the prices for metered and unmetered customers for both the residential and commercial users.

NMC Summer 2010 registration begins this week

Registration for the Northern Marianas College's Summer 2010 semester will begin this week on Wednesday, May 19, 2010, and will continue to Friday, May 21, 2010.

New students are required to take an English and Math placement test before they register. The schedule of placement tests and the Summer 2010 class schedule can be found online at www.nmcnet.edu.

The Summer 2010 semester is divided into four sessions: Regular Summer Session (nine-week courses), Extended Summer Session (twelve-week courses), Summer Session I (six-week courses) and Summer Session II (six-week courses starting July 6).

Those who have not applied for admission can still do so by visiting the College's Office of Admissions and Records and picking up an application form. Application forms can also be downloaded from the NMC Web site.

Application for admissions will be accepted until the last day of registration provided that both placement tests have been taken. Note the following dates below:

WORKERS

Most of the banners and streamers at the motorcade and assembly carried the word "Yes" or the phrase "Yes to Interior recommendations." Chants of "yes to improved status" also filled the air.

Nonresident workers hope that Congress will hear their resounding support for Interior's recommendations—conferring outright U.S. citizenship on aliens, granting them permanent residency status leading to U.S. citizenship, or granting them a status similar to that of Freely Associated States citizens—and immediately act on these recommendations.

"I am optimistic that the U.S. Congress will look into this issue seriously and quickly. We hope they will take a fast action on the Interior recommendations," Rabby Syed, president of the United Workers Movement-NMI and one of the event organizers, told Saipan Tribune.

Spectacle

The motorcade started at 2:28pm at the Kilili Beach Park in Susupe, and the last vehicle didn't reach American Memorial Park in Garapan for the assembly until around 4pm.

Event organizers and participants put the crowd estimate between 2,000 and 5,000, while vehicle estimate was at 300 to 700, exceeding the expectations of the organizers.

The spectacle started long before the first vehicle left the Kilili Beach Park, as workers, their children and supporters in a festive mood greeted one another. Most of them wore white shirts, while some also wore yellow arm bands and head bands with the word "yes."

Some of the vehicles carried banners and streamers, as well as yellow, white or blue balloons.

Motorists who didn't make it to the motorcade honked their horns to show solidarity.

Yesterday's event was reminiscent of the 2007 unity march, whose core organizers like the United Workers Movement-NMI, Dekada, and the Marianas Advocates for Humanitarian Affairs Ltd. or MAHAL, once again showed their unity in an effort to ask the federal government to grant improved status for long-term alien workers in the CNMI.

Better status

Zenny Cuerdo, who has been a contract worker on Saipan for 18 years, said she joined the unity march in 2007.

"Now that the Interior has already come up with recommendations, workers are showing their support to these recommendations. And that's why we're here," Cuerdo said shortly before the start of the motorcade.

Yang Jun, publisher of the Chinese newspaper Pacific Weekly, said it's time that workers show support to the Interior report and recommendation.

He has been on Saipan for 14 years.

Sulyman, 34, from Bangladesh, hopes that Congress will grant "better status" to foreign workers like him who have been in the CNMI for at least five years. Sulyman came to the CNMI 13 years ago to work as a garment ironer, before becoming a construction worker and then a farmer.

Nonresident parents also brought their U.S. citizen children to the motorcade and assembly.

"I'm here to support my parents," said Joanne Orosco, a 10-year-old U.S. citizen who is among the thousands of children who fear having to choose between staying on Saipan where they were born or go with their nonresident worker parents who may be forced to leave the islands once they lose status to remain in the CNMI after 2014 or earlier.

Her mother, Nenita Orosco, 45, has been a contract worker on Saipan for 17 years, first as a garment sewer then as a food catering employee earning a minimum wage of $4.55 an hour.

"This is it. We are thankful for the high turnout," said Rene Reyes, president of the Marianas Advocates for Humanitarian Affairs Ltd. or MAHAL and one of the organizers of the motorcade and assembly.

At the assembly, speakers like lawyers Jane Mack and Steve Woodruff, Dr. Gene Sylvester Eagle-Oden, and Francisco Dela Cruz, a local senior citizen, delivered inspiring remarks.

"What you're asking for [improved status] is a right," said Eagle-Oden.

Glen Hunter read a statement by former lawmaker and staunch supporter of worker rights Tina Sablan, while event organizers distributed copies of statements from Bandila and U.S.-based Filipino-American community leader and lawyer Rodel Rodis.

Both Bandila, through its spokesperson Nilo S. Tayag, and Rodis, support the CNMI nonresident workers' quest for green card or U.S. citizenship.

'Closer than ever'

Sablan, in her prepared message, said "We are closer than ever to our goal," referring to the collective efforts to realign immigration reform and improved status for the CNMI's alien workers.

"Our task now, as I see it, is two-fold. First, we must appeal to Congress to act quickly and favorably on the Interior secretary's recommendations by passing legislation to grant long-term status, including a pathway to citizenship, to the CNMI's legal alien workers. ... Second, we must reach out to everyone here at home—those who understand and support our efforts, and those who may be fearful or insecure," Sablan's message partly reads.

Woodruff, in his remarks, said for 30 years, the CNMI has operated under a system that divided foreign workers from local workers—to the detriment of all workers.

"It is a system that devalued our Chamorro and Carolinian brothers and sisters, at the same time that it claimed to protect them. We have begun the transition away from that system. Now is the time to complete that process," Woodruff told the big crowd gathered at the American Memorial Park amphitheater.

Woodruff, who has long been a supporter of worker's rights, also said "now is the time to liberate the people of the CNMI from the failed policies and prejudices of the past" and to emancipate the CNMI economy.

"And the way to do that is by unifying and integrating our community. The way we do that is with a resounding 'yes' to improved status for long-term alien residents in the CNMI. So let 'yes' be heard from every island and every street and every village from the CNMI to the nation's capital in Washington, D.C.," Woodruff added.

Noel Reyes, a local resident from Susupe, said he joined the assembly to show support to nonresident workers and their families.

He said while his fellow residents may have opposite views on the issue of alien worker status, he would stand up for what he believes is right.

"If you believe in something, you have to stand for it. If it doesn't work, at least you tried. I hope we all think about the effects of a total removal of alien workers in the CNMI. And this is not only about jobs. This is about opportunities. This is the U.S.A.," he added.

Opposition

There were some who rebuked the motorcade and assembly.

Edwin Sta. Teresa, a nonresident worker in the CNMI for 15 years, said he was on his way to his vehicle for the motorcade when a group of indigent residents stopped in front of him in Susupe to tell him: "If you want to have U.S. citizenship, go to the U.S. and complain. F___ you."

"I was upset with what one of them said. I lost my respect for him," Sta. Teresa added.

Workers also signed petitions in support of the Interior report.

Another set of petition opposing the Interior report is also circulating in the CNMI and online, and this is led by the CNMI Women's Organization, a non-profit organization.

The online petition can be accessed at www.petitiononline.com/4NMI/petition.html.

Rose Ada-Hocog, secretary and public relations officer of the CNMI Women's Organization, said Interior did not consult the "natives" of the CNMI—Chamorros and Carolinians—in its preparation and submission of the report and recommendation to Congress.

U.S. Public Law 110-229 or the federalization law requires Interior to consult with the CNMI governor and the Homeland Security secretary on any recommendation on the immigration status of alien workers in the CNMI.

FITIAL

Fitial's trip came on the same day thousands of nonresident workers, their relatives, and supporters held a motorcade and assembly to show support to the Interior report and to call on the U.S. Congress to act on the Interior recommendation. (See main story)

The Fitial administration, as well as the CNMI House of Representatives and Senate, said they oppose the Interior report because the agency did not consult the CNMI government prior to submitting the report and recommendation to Congress.

Fitial will be one of those testifying at a May 18 congressional oversight hearing on the implementation of Public Law 110-229 or the federalization law.

The CNMI immigration came under federal control on Nov. 28, 2009 as a result of PL 110-229.

The U.S. House Subcommittee on Insular Areas, Oceans, and Wildlife, chaired by Guam Delegate Madeleine Z. Bordallo, will conduct the oversight hearing.

The Fitial administration said that, while the hearing will be focused on the tourist visa waiver program, they expect the Interior report to be a topic of discussion as well.

Press secretary Angel Demapan said the joint resolution adopted by the House and Senate will be incorporated in Fitial's testimony to the subcommittee.

ey raised by a family after it netted $13,516.70. It also bagged this year's most spirited, best tent, and the most luminaries sold with over $1,100.

Team Pacific Islands Club was hailed winner of the most money raised award in the corporate category, with a total of $12,186. Grace Christian Academy, meanwhile, topped the school category with $2,602.

The Transportation Security Administration won in the government category with a total of $7,717.37 raised.

According to Janine F. Nogis, MMAC overall chairperson, they collected a total of $60,963 from all 15 teams that participated in the event and recorded a total collection of $75,463.16, including in-kind donations.

This year's take is a bit lower than last year's haul, which amounted to over $77,000 but is still higher than the 2008 total of $71,000.

Named as this year's best baton was Team IT&E/Saipan Southern High School, while the most laps award went to Team Marianas Variety/Marianas High School.

"The 2010 MMAC event was without a doubt an emotional roller coaster. It's a once-a-year, 12-hour event where the community can remember our loved ones who have passed and honor those who have survived and are still fighting. It's a beautiful thing! I thank all the survivors who came out and allowed us to share their special moment with them," Nogis told Saipan Tribune, adding that they are also very appreciative of the community and cancer victims' families who came out.

"It's always hard to attend events like these knowing our loved ones who strongly opposes the Interior report recommending granting permanent immigration status to long-term foreign workers in the CNMI.

It also asks Congress to "direct" the Interior to "consult" with Fitial as mandated by PL 110-229.

Demapan said Fitial will also reiterate the CNMI government's request to the federal government to include China and Russia in the visa waiver program.

In October 2009, Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano used her "parole" powers to grant the CNMI's request to be allowed to continue receiving Chinese and Russian visitors at least until DHS issues a final rule on the joint Guam-CNMI Visa Waiver Program.

Under this parole program, Russian and Chinese tourists will still be allowed to enter the CNMI without a U.S. visa for up to 45 days.

Bordallo's subcommittee also invited the Department of Homeland Security, Interior, and the Government Accountability Office to testify at the hearing.

GAO, the investigative arm of the U.S. Congress, recently issued its report, "Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands: DHS Should Conclude Negotiations and Finalize Regulations to Implement Federal Immigration Law."

The 88-page report discusses its audit of federal efforts to complete the transition to federal immigration control in the CNMI and highlights the unfinished business, including issuance of final regulations for the CNMI-only investor rule and the CNMI transitional worker rules.

have lost the fight aren't here to share it with us. I myself just lost my grandmother, Juanita Fleming, in March of this year," she shared.

Nogis lauded the hard work of her committee members for months of stressful planning to ensure the event will be a success.

She said MMAC is very thankful to all the sponsors and teams for their hard work and support.

"MMAC would not survive if not for our wonderful teams, sponsors, and the entire community. Also, MMAC is beyond thankful for the hardworking men and women from the Saipan Mayor's Office."

Like in previous years, several cancer survivors in the CNMI were presented with medallions and shared inspiring messages with spectators.

Various entertainment numbers were also featured, including mini carnivals and games for the children and music and dance performances of different groups.

Team Bodig captain Jocelyn Deleon Guerrero, in an interview with Saipan Tribune, said this year marked the group's 11th year of supporting the worthy cause.

The family first joined in 1999 when the event was still called "Relay for Life" under the American Cancer Society. The Marianas March Against Cancer was formed in 2004.

Deleon Guerrero, whose mother and sister were victims of cancer, said the effort initially started with family members and kept growing every year.

Besides selling luminaries for the event and serving dinner during the occasion, Team Bodig also spearheaded other fundraisers such as coin drives and lunch sales prior to the event. Last year, Deleon Guerrero's team raised $11,000 for the same cause and vowed to continue the family's support in coming years.

US govt agrees to postpone Joyner's sentencing

The U.S. government has agreed to postpone the sentencing of convicted methamphetamine or "ice" distributor Jawn Joyner.

Assistant U.S. attorney James J. Benedetto reached an agreement with Joyner's counsel, Bruce Berline, to set the sentencing for Friday, May 21, at 8am.

The sentencing date was May 7, but Berline requested for more time to review the amended pre-sentence report and prepare for the hearing.

Benedetto stipulated with Berline to have the new sentencing date.

Last January, the federal court allowed Joyner to speak to students while awaiting sentencing about not going into a life of crime.

Joyner signed a plea agreement with the U.S. government. He pleaded guilty to three counts of possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute.

According to the charging information, the defendant was found in possession with intent to distribute 0.34 actual grams of "ice" on Sept. 12, 2008; 0.19 actual grams of "ice" on Oct. 8, 2008; and 0.36 actual grams of "ice" on March 17, 2009.

Under the plea agreement, the stipulated sentencing guidelines range is 12 to 18 months imprisonment.

The U.S. government will recommend 12 months in prison.

The agreement also indicated that the applicable fine range is $3,000 to $30,000. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Judge stands pat on statements about violation of Robinson's rights

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE
ferdie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

U.S. District Court for the NMI designated judge Mark W. Bennett is standing by his statements at the hearing in the case against Kent Sebastian Robinson, a defendant facing charges that he produced a forged $200 million treasury bond, that the U.S. government violated Robinson's rights by denying him a detention hearing.

Bennett, however, emphasized that while the wheels of justice came to a screeching halt here for Robinson, he finds it was "due to a cataclysmic and shocking concurrence of gross inadvertence, negligence, and ignorance of the law, but not intentional misconduct."

"The prosecution, which is under a duty to do justice and to ensure the integrity of the criminal justice system, had an obligation to ensure that Robinson's statutory and constitutional rights were not trampled in the course of proceedings leading to his detention. The prosecution failed to meet that obligation here," said the visiting federal judge from Iowa in his 47-page order.

At the hearing last April 21, Bennett ordered the release of Robinson on terms and conditions after he found that the U.S. government failed to move for a detention hearing since the defendant's arrest.

The U.S. government then requested the court to allow it to supplement the record concerning the prosecution's efforts to comply with the requirements of the law for the detention of Robinson.

The prosecution asked the judge to consider the supplemental information as it is pertinent to the correctness of his criticism of the prosecution's conduct in Robinson's detention.

In his order granting the prosecution's request to supplement the record, Bennett said the interests of justice and fairness require that the prosecution be allowed to supplement the record with the information.

Bennett, however, noted that nothing in the supplemental information provided requires him to correct any findings or statements regarding the prosecution's conduct.

"In light of the supplemental information I am, if anything, more shocked at the prosecution's disregard of Robinson's statutory and constitutional rights in the proceedings leading to his improper pretrial detention," he said.

The judge said it is unconscionable that any criminal defendant in a federal prosecution in the United States be held in pretrial detention for some 30 days without a proper detention hearing and proper detention order.

Nevertheless, Bennett said, having found that injustice in the case, he wants to make clear that he does not have any bad faith or intentional misconduct by the U.S. Attorney's Office.

"To a person, I found each Assistant U.S. Attorney I dealt with in the District of the Northern Mariana Islands to be of exceptional good faith, highly professional, and with a surprisingly strong sense of and passion for justice and fairness," Bennett said.

Attorney Bruce Berline, the court-appointed on stand-by counsel for Robinson, argued at the April 21 hearing that the defendant had not received a detention hearing and therefore he should be released immediately on his own cognizance.

The trial of Robinson was set for Aug. 9, 2010 at 9am.

Robinson has bombarded the federal court with handwritten motions that he filed without a lawyer.

The indictment charged Robinson with fraudulent uttering of a private security, making and uttering of a fictitious obligation, and mail fraud.

According to the indictment, on Dec. 19, 2008, Robinson made a counterfeited and forged document—a Secured Funding and Offset Bond—purportedly registered with the U.S. Department of Treasury.

The "Offset Bond" which declared a value of being $200 million was paid to the order of Oceania Insurance Corp., a company registered and doing business in the CNMI.

REPORTER

Koblerville Elementary School topped the 9th Annual Chamorro and Carolinian Language Heritage Studies Academic Challenge Bowl competition, sweeping five of the 14 gold medals last Saturday at Chacha Oceanview Junior High School.

There were over 50 students from 16 public schools that joined the competition which main objective was to promote and enhance the students' interest in the indigenous languages.

Besides the five gold medals, Koblerville was also named recipient of two silver awards for both Chamorro and Carolinian language competitions, which allowed it to top contest's medal tally.

Rota's Sinapalo Elementary School finished runner-up after winning six medals overall, which included three gold, two silver, and a bronze medal.

Kagman Elementary School also went home with five medals including two gold, two silver, and a bronze.

Tinian Elementary School and Gregorio T. Camacho Elementary School were tied for third place after both won four medals. Tinian went home with one silver and three bronze medals, while GTC got one gold, two silver, and a bronze medal.

Dandan Elementary School and Tanapag Elementary School also won three medals each in the competition, while Chacha Oceanview Junior High School received a gold and a silver awards.

Garapan Elementary School was also victorious when it won gold in the sixth grade division along with Rota Junior High who emerged champion in the Chamorro category in its division.

William S. Reyes Elementary School and Hopwood Junior High School each also won a bronze medal from the competition.

Throughout the five-hour competition set for first through 8th grade students, parents and teachers were seen extending support to their contestants.

Gold medalist Aisha Reubenog, an 8th grader from Chacha Oceanview Junior High School, expressed her joy upon getting the top award in her division.

She has been in the competition since her third grade and was the second time she went home with a gold medal from the contest.

"It feels good and I have fun throughout the competition," she told Saipan Tribune after the awarding rites, adding that she prepared for the contest since last month and was happy that all their efforts were paid off.

Reubenog acknowledged the importance of the competition in the preservation of the indigenous language and culture.

All participants in the competition were the top students selected to represent their schools in the annual contest, which is conducted based on the PSS Chamorro/Carolinian Language Heritage Studies standards and benchmarks.

Pat Kapileo, PSS coordinator for CCLHS, described this year's turnout as a success emphasizing the great performance demonstrated by the students.

There were 25 total questions given to participants that covered five content areas—math, science, social studies, language arts, and CCLHS. All questions were given orally in vernacular to measure the knowledge of students in the lessons learned from the CCLHS class throughout the year.

"It's very good. We saw great improvement from our students," Kapileo told Saipan Tribune, lauding the involvement of both parents and teachers in the progress of the children.

PSS has its own benchmarks and standards for CCLHS program which addresses interpersonal communication, reading process, writing process, cultural values and academic oral communication of students.

INVITATION FOR BID

CUC-IFB-10-032

The Office of the Executive Director, Commonwealth Utilities Corporation (CUC) is soliciting competitive sealed bids from qualified individuals or firms for the urgent supply of major overhaul and limited running parts for MITSUI #1 OVERHAUL project at Rota Power Plant CNMI.

Emergency generator sets will be used to power the island of Rota, while CUC takes down MITSUI #1 for major engine overhaul and rehabilitation. MITSUI #1 is seriously overdue for overhaul and the power situation on Rota is very critical.

A site visit and pre-bid meeting is not necessary, but bidders who wish to visit Rota power plant will be permitted with prior approval. All proposers are advised that CUC assumes no responsibility in any act of omission on part of the proposers due to a lack of information or understanding of the plant site conditions in the course of the Contractor's preparation of a bid or performance of work under the contract.

The Scope-of-Work and Bid package will be e-mailed upon request, to all interested bidders, by the CUC, Procurement & Supply Office, during working hours (7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.), Monday thru Friday, except government observed holidays, until June 9, 2010.

One (1) original and Six (6) copies must be submitted in a seal envelope marked "IFB 10-032 MITSUI#1 OVERHAUL PARTS" to the CUC Procurement & Supply Office, Room No.4, 3rd Floor Joeten Dandan, P.O.Box 501220, Saipan MP 96950, no later than Wednesday, June 16, 2010 at 10:00 AM, (CHST) local time, at which time they will be publicly opened and read aloud. Late submissions and conditional bids will not be considered.

The contractor will also be required to comply with all CNMI and applicable Federal Laws. This bid and the ensuing contract shall be executed as per the CUC Procurement Regulations.

Selection procedure shall be in full compliance with CUC Procurement Regulations. CUC reserves the right to reject any or all bids and wave any imperfection in the bid proposal in the interest of the government. All bids shall become the property of CUC.

All inquires must be submitted in writing no later than 10:00 AM local time on June 11, 2010 to Mr. Manuel B. 2 stores sued over expired items settle lawsuits

The Superior Court has dismissed the lawsuits against two of several stores on Saipan being sued by the CNMI government for allegedly selling expired items without displaying notices that the merchandises have expired.

Associate judge David A. Wiseman dismissed the lawsuits after the stores settled with the government.

Wiseman said each side shall bear its own fees and costs.

With the settlement, assistant attorney general Michael L. Ernest moved for the dismissal of the lawsuits against the two stores.

According to the complaints, the stores were found selling expired items with no indications that the prices were reduced to or below half of their original retail price.

The items, the complaints said, were stocked on shelves or displayed with merchandise that had not yet reached their expiration dates in a manner that did not clearly segregate the expired items from the others.

The government asked the court to order the stores to pay penalties not to exceed $2,500 for each violation of the Consumer Protection Act, attorney's fees, and court costs. The government also requested for a court order preventing the establishments from violating the Act. (Ferdie de la Torre)

Military training at FDM

The Emergency Management Office, in conjunction with U.S. Naval Force Marianas Guam, would like to inform the general public that the U.S. military unit would be conducting military training at Farallon De Mendenilla and W-517.

The schedule date and time is as follows:

■ May. 17, 2010 from 7am-8pm, EBS military training.

■ May. 20-21 from 7am-8pm, 393 EBS military training.

■ May 19, 2010 from 7am-8pm HSC-25 military training.

The general locations for this activity will at W-517 an irregular polygon compromising of 14,000 nautical miles of airspace begins south of Guam and extend south-southwest in international waters and Farallon De Mendenilla training area R7201.

W-517 supports surface and aerial gunnery, missile and laser exercise. This will affect fishing in the vicinity of Santa Rosa and Galvez bank.

Due to the danger imposed by this activity, acting Gov. Eloy S. Inos is advising the general public—especially fishermen, commercial pilots, and marine tour operators—to stay away from this area during the time and date indicated. The cooperation and understanding of the general public is greatly appreciated.

Census 2010

Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

BEFORE THE COMMONWEALTH PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

REVIEW OF COMMONWEALTH UTILITIES
CORPORATION'S UTILITY RATES

DOCKETS 09-1, 09-2 & 10-1

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that at 9:00 a.m. on May 21, 2010, the Commonwealth Public Utilities Commission [Commission] will conduct a public hearing at the conference room of the Saipan Chamber of Commerce, located on the first floor of the Family Building, Garapan Street, Garapan to receive evidence, argument, discussion and public comment on the following regulatory matters concerning the Commonwealth Utilities Corporation [CUC].

1. Docket 10-1: CUC petition for rate relief.

The Commission will examine CUC's April 1, 2010 amended petition for rate relief, which requests that effective on or about June 21, 2010 [the effective date] its water service fees and metered rates per 1,000 gallons for all customer classes be increased by 3 percent. In its amended petition, CUC also requests that: a) its wastewater monthly service fee for all customer classes be established and increased on the effective date from $8.20 to $15.99 and then on October 1, 2010 to $21.59; b) its residential and commercial metered rate per 1,000 gallons of wastewater service be increased on the effective date from $1.37 to $2.67 and on then on October 1, 2010 to $3.61; and that c) its government metered rate per 1,000 gallons of wastewater service be increased on the effective date from $30.00 to $59.00 and then on October 1, 2010 to $80.00. CUC asserts that these increases are just, reasonable and necessary to enable it to comply with: a) the statutory mandate that it bill and collect adequate rate revenue to recover the costs associated with the operation and delivery of service, including financial reserves and b) the requirements of the Federal Stipulated Order dated March 11, 2009, in USA v. CUC and CNMI.

In its amended petition, CUC also requests that the Commission approve: a) a credit card convenience fee of 2.1% for customers who pay their utility bills with Visa or MasterCard and a fee of 3.7% for customers who pay their bills with American Express; and b) a standby charge of $5 per kW for CUC commercial customers, which are connected to the CUC electric grid and who regularly generate some portion of their own electricity needs. CUC's amended petition is supported by testimony and documentary evidence, which is available for public review at the Chamber's office and also on-line at the Chamber's website [www.saipanchamber.com] under Public Utilities, Docket 10-01.

The Commission tasked its independent regulatory consultant [Georgetown] to investigate, review and submit testimony on CUC's petition. Georgetown's report was filed with the Commission on May 5, 2010 and is also available for public review at both the Chamber's office and website. In its report, Georgetown asserts that: a) no present increase in CUC water rates is necessary; b) the staggered wastewater rate increases sought by CUC should be frontloaded and implemented on the effective date; c) a flat charge of $40 per month should be established for unmetered residential water service and a flat rate of $204 per month be established for unmetered commercial water service; and d) a residential and commercial monthly wastewater service fee of $18.72 should be implemented on the effective date; and e) CUC's wastewater tariff should be redesigned.

2. Docket 09-1: CUC Electric Division. LEAC Rate and collateral matters.

Pursuant to a tariff [levelized energy adjustment clause] established on December 19, 2008 by Commission order, the Commission reviews and approves the semi-annual rate, which CUC is authorized to charge its electric customers in order to recover its projected fuel and related expenses during the period. On May 5, 2010, CUC and Georgetown filed a joint report and recommendation that for the period June 1, 2010 through September 30, 2010, the current LEAC rate of $0.20147 cents per kWh be increased to $0.27634 cents per kWh. The proposed increase would increase the average monthly residential electric bill [1,000 kWh per month] by approximately 36 percent. This joint report also reconciles projected versus actual fuel expenses incurred by CUC in prior LEAC periods and recommends appropriate adjustments in order to keep LEAC charges revenue neutral. The May 5, 2010 joint CUC/Georgetown LEAC report is available for public inspection at the Chamber's office and at its website under Public Utilities - Docket 09-1. At the public hearing, the Commission will also consider CUC's April 1, 2010 petition for reconsideration of the Commission's September 3, 2009 order regarding regulatory conditions for approval of the CUC-CDA Preferred Stock Agreement, as further discussed in said order.

3. Docket 09-2: CUC - Water and Wastewater Divisions.

On January 31, 2010, CUC petitioned the Commission for approval of certain elements of a proposed settlement agreement between CUC, Guam Pacific Power Corporation and CPPC Construction. On May 5, 2010, Georgetown issued a report, in which it expressed serious reservations about certain elements of the transaction. The parties will be requested to brief the Commission on this regulatory matter at the public hearing.

THE COMMISSION WELCOMES THE PUBLIC'S ATTENDANCE at the May 21, 2010 public hearing and will welcome public comments at the conclusion of the hearing. Persons who desire to formally participate in the hearing pursuant to 4 CMC § 8409(j) should on or before May 14, 2010 file with the Commission at the Chamber's office an application and offer of proof in accordance with §8409(j) and Commission Procedural Rule 11(c). Subsequent to the public hearing, the Commission will schedule, notice and conduct a special business meeting to consider and make decisions regarding matters considered at the public hearing. Further information about the public hearing and the public's right to participate may be obtained from Commissioner Kyle Calabrese at 670-233-7150.

Solar Car Team

Saipan's InYong Chung and 18 of his schoolmates from the University of Michigan Solar Car Team are working full time preparing to defend their back-to-back National Championships and become the first team in history to win three consecutive American Solar Challenge titles.

Last fall the team competed with its solar car Infinium in the World Solar Challenge, an 1,800-mile race across the Australian Outback.

Facing fierce competition from University and corporate teams from around the world, Infinium placed 3rd and took home the 2009 Technical Innovation Award. The team is now preparing Infinium to race from Tulsa, OK to Chicago, IL in ASC this June; this will be the 2009 vehicles second and final race.

ASC 2010s 1,100-mile route is the shortest it has been in a decade, challenging the teams to achieve a higher level of precision to stay ahead in this race. Although the solar car can only carry its single driver, racing requires an entire crew of team members to compete in the unique circumstance of a solar car race. One of the most important race crew roles is that of strategist. Strategists use computer simulation and optimization to determine how fast to race the solar car, and make decisions that ultimately determine our success in the race. Because the race is held on open roads with public traffic, the race crew caravan serves not only to provide race strategy, but also to protect the 600-lb. solar car from street traffic. The six-vehicle caravan is seamlessly coordinated through the use of radio communication equipped on all caravan vehicles, including the solar car.

The University of Michigan Solar Car Team is an entirely student-run organization whose purpose is to design, finance, build, and race a solar-powered vehicle in competitions around North America and the world. We are dedicated to the development of our members as teammates, educators, and leaders, and to the education of our community on the potentials of alternative energy technology.

CPA scrambles for cash to improve airport

The Commonwealth Ports Authority is studying various financing scheme to raise the additional $9 to $11 million needed to carry out the expansion of West Tinian Airport, according to Carlos H. Salas, executive director. With the $4 million Capital Improvement Fund set aside by the Tinian Legislative Delegation and the $4.6 million grant of the Federal Aviation Administration, Salas said the ports authority would have to look for the best financing offer to complete the project. The Tinian Delegation had emphasized that development of the casino industry on the island hinges on the capability of the existing West Tinian airport runway to accommodate bigger aircraft to bring in substantial numbers of people on direct flights to the island.

Transfer of DPS functions draw more protests

A proposal to transfer some key functions of the Department of Public Safety to mayors has angered a number of officials in the administration and some have called for the resignation of Commissioner Charles Ingram if he insists on pursuing the plan. "This only reflects that he cannot handle the job," said a ranking official of the government who declined to be identified. Tenorio on Friday met with Ingram, but its was not clear whether the police chief received a lashing from the CNMI leader, who previously expressed surprised about news reports attributing such plan to the DPS commissioner.

Education leaders establish task force

Education leaders yesterday initiated steps to organize a special task force which will take the lead in preparing students acquire necessary skills that will land them competitive jobs in the future. Members of the Legislature, Board of Education, Board of Regents, Northern Marianas College, Public School System, and the private sector yesterday agreed during a meeting at Dai-Ichi hotel to institute a group that will revive and improve vocational and occupational programs in schools. The task force is expected to be comprised of representatives from all sectors of the community. House Committee on Education Chair Brigida Ichihara said the task force's main agenda is to improve the teaching, nursing, and trade skills among students by bringing back the quality of school programs being offered at NMC, Marianas High School, and other schools.

The Civil Rights Division lawyer blamed Mr. Soll for the predicament he now reportedly faces, saying that he has been hounded with calls and questions on whether he could still handle cases that have previously been assigned to him.

CPA needs $40M to fund 5-year plan

The Commonwealth Ports Authority is seeking financial and technical assistance from the US Department of Transportation for the realization of its five-year airport improvement masterplan. Executive Director Carlos H. Salas said about $40 million will be needed to effectively carry out CPA's priority infrastructure projects on Saipan, Tinian and Rota. Mr. Salas said the transportation department promised to help CPA with its proposed terminal expansion projects for the Saipan, Tinian and Rota international airports. Under the five-year plan, CPA will carry out major improvements in all of the three islands' air transport facilities, with Saipan needing $29 million, Rota would need $1 million and Tinian would require about $10 million.

Greece and us: The real danger is within

There is good news and bad news about the debt crisis in Greece. The good news is that, notwithstanding stock markets' breathtaking plunge and recovery of recent days, it doesn't seem likely to do much damage to the U.S. economy.

The bad news is that the U.S. economy will suffer a lot if this country keeps following the sort of fiscal policies that have created the crisis in Greece.

Greece's problem is that it has lived far beyond its means. Its government budget deficit is now nearly 14 percent of its gross domestic product, and its total debt is 115 percent of GDP. The Greek parliament has approved some painful cuts and tax increases, but recent strikes and riots raise doubts whether the government can make them stick.

The nearly $1 trillion bailout by the European Union and the International Monetary Fund has reassured investors, who had grown very skittish about getting repaid. Markets jittered and jived Tuesday, but that major rescue effort seems to have halted the panic and kept it from spreading, at least for now.

Though the Greek economy is small, its collapse could have dampened growth even on this side of the Atlantic, so the improvement is good news for Americans. Fortunately, the U.S. economy is showing signs of a durable recovery, with three consecutive quarters of growth and low inflation. Hiring is also picking up at last.

Banks have emerged from the downturn with stronger balance sheets. Robust growth in countries such as China and India is serving as a tonic for economies in the rest of the world.

But the hopeful short-term prospects here in the U.S. are no reason for complacency. The real problem for the American economy is that the federal government (and many states, insolvent Illinois included) is making the same fiscal mistakes that led Greece to the edge of the cliff.

The federal budget deficit is expected to top 10 percent of GDP this year, the highest since World War II, and next year won't be much better. Given current trends, the total debt will reach a scary 90 percent of GDP just a decade from now.

Much of the recent deficit spending in Washington stems from a defensible response to a severe economic crisis. But once that is past, spending will continue to rise, by nearly 60 percent over the next decade. Revenues will lag far behind.

Add in an unexpected economic downturn sometime in the next few years, and a bad situation could get much worse — a la what's happening in Greece. The U.S. has the advantage that the dollar enjoys a preferred place as the international reserve currency, giving our policymakers more latitude. But that status is not guaranteed for all time.

If Americans want to avoid the fate of today's Greece, they had better do what the Greeks failed to do: scale down what they demand from the government and accept the need to pay for what they get. Otherwise, our future will bear a grim resemblance to Greece's present.

Let's start our own business!

If you believe as I do that we can improve ourselves and our economy, please continue reading. If you believe that we can do nothing to help ourselves and feel that the only outside investors or more freebies from the U.S. government are the only solutions, stop reading here. Go on to the sports page. However I hope that the youth and more determined citizens will read on.

The first step to rebuilding our economy is to take it back step by step. Let's begin with the small business shops from where we purchase our daily necessities such as grocery stores and the many other shops we frequent daily. At the same time we will make ourselves stronger financially.

For example, we have over 150 grocery stores scattered over Saipan. Why are about 95 percent of them owned and operated by outsiders? Do you know what their revenue is each week? Do any of us know the markup on the items we buy? Why do you think so many small businesses are owned and operated by foreigners? It's because a well-run small business offers a profitable living—more than we would earn as an employee in that store or working for the government.

What is keeping us from opening and operating a grocery store in our neighborhood? Why don't we operate a beauty shop or barbershop? There are over 70 beauty and barbershops and not one of them is owned and operated by us. How about a restaurant serving authentic local food? Hey, how about a clothing store? Why not open a handicraft shop featuring locally made bead jewelry, paper novelty items such as those made from magazines like the prisoners make? We could include woodcarvings and many other local handicrafts.

How about we open up local fruit and produce stalls and locally owned fish stalls around the island instead of these being owned and operated by non-indigenous people? Check out the various cosmetics that we can make from coconuts and other local fruits such as papaya. Have any of us considered making soap from coconuts? It is very smooth on the skin. How about a local medicinal herb shop where both the tourists and we locals can purchase these items?

Instead of the government doing all the tree, roadside brush, and hedge trimmings, let's form a group and make a proposal to the government to let us do the work. In Hawaii it is very successful. There is similar highway cleaning work we could also solicit from the government. This spreads the work and revenue around.

There are over 60 automobile repair shops on Saipan? How many are locally owned? Why are they also mainly operated by non-indigenous residents? Are you telling me that we don't know how to repair autos and trucks? We could solicit the various government agencies such as public works, the hospital, even the police department cars to outsource their repair work to us? Those would be great contracts which repeat themselves. Think about it!

We know how to bake bread and pastries. I bet a good cookie shop would go over well. We can even sell the various baked goodies in restaurants and bars, especially where tourist frequent. Also why do restaurants never offer local fresh fruit as desserts? Why don't we who grow them and solicit their business?

Soon the students of NMTI will be ready to operate their own home-improvement shops. We can learn how to do home improvement work. It is a huge and profitable market. I was in it for ten years in Hawaii. Have we considered exporting some of the unique products or items we have or could make on Saipan? For example, how about perfumes and lotions made from flowers such as orchids or from other products. Have you ever thought about making and exporting coconut vinegar? The list goes on and on.

Our imagination is limitless. But we need the desire and determination. A lot of unique things we have on Saipan could be easily sold on the Internet. Learn about Internet selling. It brings the whole world to your living room. Does all of this sound crazy? Maybe. But we don't know until we try, right?

The above mentions only a few of the small shops and businesses we could own and operate in which we can earn a handsome profit and the pride in doing so. And all the money we and our neighbors spend in our shops would stay here. Our tourists would be happy to visit the shops as well. Let's do it!

Is it lack of money? Lack of know-how? Lack of ambition or desire? If it is lack of money, it is available. That is a minor problem. If it is lack of know-how to operate a small business that can be quickly learned. However if it is a lack of ambition or desire, then you have a major problem which only you can resolve.

For anyone interested in exploring the possibilities of owning and operating his/her own business, the Northern Marianas Trades Institute will be offering a new Entrepreneurial Class for learning how to set up your small business on May 24. The course will be a practical one. You, the student, will not only learn the basic of setting up your own business, but together with the instructor actually set one up.

Yes, all the work of starting a business will be done together. We will write the business plan, search for the location, and do all the necessary market research. Best of all, you and the instructor will find where the money will come from to start the new venture. You will be shown how to apply for a loan. We will also discuss the legal structure of your new business.

The class starts on Monday, May 24. Please call the school at 235-6684 to enroll. This is your opportunity to fulfill your dream.

Both men and women are invited regardless of age. The only criteria are the strong desire to own a business. This class is not a theory course, but a practical one. Don't worry about the fee. We will find it together. If you are really serious to begin a business of your own but have been afraid to do so, then this is the must course.

While everybody is crying doom and gloom—you will be shouting: "It's boom time!" It is in times like this that the people who push ahead will most likely prosper. Dreams come true to the brave of heart. The road to your prosperity lies just ahead. Let's join hands and walk together towards it. We can realize our dreams if we wish and work hard enough for them.

Please don't forget to register as soon as possible. The course starts on May 24. Class size will be limited so register early. Remember it is a personalized course for your new business venture. Meanwhile think about and research what business you want to own and operate. The road to prosperity lies just ahead. Join hands with me and let's travel down it.

Minding in May our mental health

No virtuous act is quite as virtuous from the standpoint of our friend or foe as from our own; therefore, we are saved by the final form of love, which is forgiveness.

Bill Weiss, one of two medical practitioners who are covering physician-challenged Tinian Health Center, wrote not too long ago with a tone of alarm about the increasing evidence of anxiety overload being exhibited by our population.

Reading the recent net traffic occasioned by the DOI's recommendation to the United States Congress on the disposition of the not-quite resident "aliens" in the CNMI before 11-30-11 leaves one in the disquietude of angst. Looking at our stance regarding the paradoxically needed yet frequently exploited and reviled residents of non-Chamolinian origins and extraction, and of non-immigrant legal status, one gets the impression that a pillar to our social stability had come unglued.

Stark polarization is rapidly forming, with the indigenes perceived as "threatened," or, at least, disrespected and ignored by decision makers, and the overstaying non-haole expats as gaining courage and assertiveness, perceived as being on a 'warpath' abetted by the Feds and their carpet-bagging mercenaries. It is anxiety time in paradise as claims gets aired: one side cowers in defensive breast-beating, and the other takes their new sense of power into "in-your-face" konfrantasi.

China in the last few months saw despondents express frustrations by inflicting violence on children and then taking their own lives. The latter is significant because the ultimate punishment of execution as a deterrent does not work. In fact, the opposite happened. The swift execution of a well-publicized perpetrator had not stopped the senseless killing of the innocent. The prospect of death deters no one, and labeling homicidal persons as "criminals," rather than as persons with mental health issues acting out their pent-up frustrations, benefits no one.

It is easy to dismiss those who express frustrations in violent acts with conventional labels such as 'terrorist,' branding them in our current lexicon of undesirable aliens as outside the norm of legiti-mate human response (unless we are the ones doing it, in which case victims are 'collateral damage'), such as the guy who packed his SUV with incendiaries and drove it to NYC's heartland. The young man was burdened by a deep sense of failure with the economic collapse of his circumstances, and under the shadows of a father's frustrations with a Pakistani Air Force career.

Condemning the actions of those whose identities are suddenly reduced to insignificance, and vocations drastically dismissed into irrelevance and resort to violence out of frustrations is the easy way out. This is true of both extremes of the political spectrum. Trying to understand the enigma of human behavior in its full complexity tend to point back to our own inadequately understood struggles.

I had a 15-year-old in a 6th grade class transferred from another school in the middle of the year for behavioral reasons. He was a quiet guy, told in the previous four years that he did not measure up to the academic requirements of his age. The distress caused in the young man is unimaginable, not to mention the humiliation in having to live through the perceived sneers of peers much younger than he was. Once I reminded him of proper classroom behavior boundaries, he snapped and stared at me with the intensity of one ready to unleash the power of nuclear fusion.

"Be thankful that you are a teacher. . ." he said rather coldly. I found my palms sweating with fear as if I had just seen the face of evil personified, and I was back to the shriveling toad of my Friday-the-13th mode of teenybopper existence, unable to hear the rest of his declaration! And horror of horrors, in my attempt to bolster my sense of security and guard the parameters of my pedagogical righteousness, I fashioned ways to contain this young man and others of his kind, in my classroom. I began acting in belligerent fashion, not unlike the fear in the young man's eyes whose bondage I knew it was my task to liberate.

It is very easy to demonize those who view matters and situations differently than we do. We delight in exposing the alleged limitations of their perspectives, and promote our own as solely the responsible posture. We relish our clarity in pointing out how lame others' grasp of the contradiction is, and the idiocy of the proposals they forward to deal with it. We do this patronizingly with the 'differently-abled' community, as if baby-sitting on the disabled is the required task.

Let me cut to the quick. I live out of an archaic notion that is relevant to any crisis-ridden situation expressed well in the above quoted lines from Richard Niebuhr.

Forgiveness is the state when we are liberated from the stranglehold of the past. (Gary Bradley, S.J., is smiling somewhere!) Each of us just normally try to redo what has either been done, or wish to return to a second chance on what we feel had previously been inadequately done. We live out of the longing to redo the past. We all do. Forgiveness is the voice that calls us to reality, "it is done, finis; move!" Some of us heed the voice and live on; others continue to live out of delusions of what-is-no-longer and illusions of what-is-not-yet.

When we do heed the voice, we are freed from bondage; we are liberated, and what stands between the future and ourselves is CHOICE. The future is open; we only need to decide. 'Grace' happens. The authority of authenticity prevails!

A politics of forgiveness is needed around the world, and more so right now in the CNMI. Leadership is not about the strong-willed telling us what to do; it is about any ordinary Juana Cruz gathering and convening people so that they can converse on what they are doing with their future, one conversation at a time. Leaders facilitate people to listen to each other; when we do, we discover that there are no locals and aliens, just neighbors in conversation! Individual and communal mental health becomes manageable. We might even get a handle on the crime rate!

NORTHERN MARIANAS IN A NUTSHELL

A brief look at sovereignty, the Covenant, self-government, & economy

The U.S. Secretary of Interior's recommendations to the U.S. Congress for long-term status for legal aliens (so-called nonresident) workers who have resided in the CNMI for five years or more is a well-known current controversy with compelling pro and con issues. It is not the subject of this article to suggest a position one way or the other as each side has many publicly expressed opinions—mine need not be added. Rather, the purpose in this series is to look back at a point in time to what I believe to be the foundation of the issue. Hopefully, those new to the islands will find this summary of "selected" historical accounts of interest to the current discussion.

During the late '60s and early '70s the then six districts which composed the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, TTPI, (formerly the Japanese Mandated Islands), consisted of the island groups of Belau (Palau), Yap, Chuuk (Truk), Pohnpei (Ponape), Kosrae (Kusaie), the Marshalls and the Northern Marianas. The U.S. Territory of Guam was not part of the Trust Territory.

Being a trust territory under the auspices of the United Nations Security Council, the United States as the administering authority under Article 6 of the Trusteeship Agreement accepted the obligation to: "foster the development of such political institutions as are suited to the trust territory and shall promote the development of the inhabitants of the trust territory toward self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of the trust territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned," etc., etc. "(1)

In preparation for what was to eventually be a plebiscite for a change in political status, the Congress of Micronesia requested that the High Commissioner undertake a program of Education for Self Government to attempt to prepare the potential voters of Micronesia with information on the economy, various forms of government, etc., for that time when their selection of a form of government would be decided. I recall this period very well as I was a member of the ESG effort along with Sam McPhetres and a group of others responsible for implementing the program.

Negotiations for self-government, and thus eventual termination of the Trusteeship Agreement, began in 1970. The people of the Marianas were the first of all the former Trust Territory entities to decide their future political identity; they decided to enter into a Commonwealth arrangement in political union with the United States. In all of Micronesia they were the only island group to do so.

The people of the Northern Marianas, by 78.8 percent of the votes cast in a plebiscite held on June 17, 1975, elected to accept a negotiated Covenant with the United States. This became U.S. Public Law 94-241 when enacted by the United States Congress and became effective on April 1, 1976, a little more than 30 years after the end of World War II.

On May 28, 1986 the United Nations Trusteeship Council concluded that the United States had satisfactorily discharged its obligations to the islands. On Nov. 4, 1986 United States citizenship was conferred upon those people of the Northern Marianas who met the necessary qualifications. On Dec. 22, 1990, the Security Council of the United Nations voted to dissolve the trusteeship over the Northern Marianas, Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia.

Now almost a quarter century after citizenship was bestowed upon qualified islanders by presidential order it should be kept in mind that at that time some people of the Northern Marianas, unlike other nationalities seeking U.S. citizenship, were not required to possess comprehensive knowledge of American history or appreciation of the principles of democracy as most Americans perceive them to be. Most foreigners seeking U.S. citizenship must study a variety of subjects related to American history, pass an examination, and swear an oath of allegiance. This was not required of the people of the Northern Marianas.

While the United States government has been accused of "meddling" in the internal affairs of the Commonwealth or alleged to have become involved in CNMI issues considered to be within the purview of self-government, many of the major issues of local concern, namely the lack of an adequate water and power system, poor roads, the importation of foreign workers, are all issues which the United States government has had no involvement—the controls on which were purely local. Indeed, in terms of foreign investment and the locally enacted laws which govern its entry into the Northern Marianas there have been many bills introduced in the local legislature to control foreign investment in the Commonwealth.

At times the CNMI/U.S. relationship has been described as contentious, perhaps because it is still evolving. Indeed, Section 902 of the Covenant permits a reassessment of the relationship every 10 years. It is probably safe to state that some people of the Northern Marianas did not clearly understand what they voted to support when the plebiscite was held in June 1975 to accept a negotiated Covenant with the United States. Certainly they were aware of some of the tangible benefits that would flow from the U. S. Treasury such as better health care, social security, educational assistance, etc.

However, there was probably little knowledge or appreciation of the extent of the full ramifications of an association with the American judicial system and the federal bureaucracy with its myriad of laws and regulatory agencies administering everything from environmental protection to occupational health and safety in the work place. Thus, the process of learning about the continuing relationship with the United States continues to evolve and be refined as time goes by. Many of the complex issues which were to arise as the future unfolded could not possibly have been foreseen in 1975 and thus a document was produced to permit flexibility in the new political relationship.

Letter to the Editor

'We all do better when we all do better'

I think a quote from the late Minnesota Sen. Paul Wellstone can best summarize my feelings about the uproar over the U.S. Department of Interior's report on the alien worker population in the CNMI and their recommendations to the U.S. Congress.

The late senator said "We all do better when we all do better." I challenge you to take a moment to ponder this profound statement, reach into your soul and think about it. Then tell me how the lowly construction worker, taxi cab driver, hair dresser, accountant, garment factory worker, or even the live-in maid has not in his or her own way contributed to this community.

Letter to the Editor

A referendum on future of long-term nonresident workers

In the short time since the OIA published its findings, recommendations, and report to the U.S. Congress, it seems that we are being baited to the lion's den. Let me just say it very simply, that the best report to the U.S. Congress is the result of a referendum on immigration by the indigenous people. It is only one simple question on the ballot. Do you approve the granting of U.S. citizenship to non-U.S. citizens presently residing in the CNMI? Yes. No.

This will be in one page report, and the OIA and those who wished to pursue further should get the message in the one-page report. This is democracy and it is one that should be pursued.

INVITATION FOR BID NMHC IFB 2010-R-003

(This ad is paid for by NMHC with HUD funds)

Governor Benigno R. Fitial and Lt. Governor Eloy S. Inos, through the Northern Marianas Housing Corporation (NMHC) Board of Directors, hereby give notice that NMHC is soliciting sealed bids for the Construction of the Tinian Amphitheater Parking Lot Infiltration System in San Jose Village, Tinian, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

The project package consisting of Technical Specifications, Plans and Bid Documents will be available on or after Monday, May 03, 2010, at the NMHC Central Office in Garapan, Saipan, during regular working hours (7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.) Monday thru Friday except CNMI holidays. A non-refundable payment of One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) is required for each set. Payment shall be by money order or cashier's check (payable to the Northern Marianas Housing Corporation).

Bidding procedures shall be in compliance with the CNMI Procurement Regulations, however, Article 7, "Local Business Preference" as amended by Public Law 15-95 and further amended by Public Law 15-118, is not available to local bidders in this procurement because its use is prohibited by the Federal law granting the funding for this project.

Bidders are also advised that this project is subject to compliance with the Davis-Bacon Act. All wage rates for laborers, mechanics and all other employees performing the work, labor and services on this project shall be paid the current minimum wage or the wage determination for the Commonwealth as required by the CNMI law/Federal law, whichever is higher.

A pre-bid conference will be held at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, May 27, 2010, at the Tinian Amphitheater in San Jose Village, Tinian and all interested bidders will be given the opportunity to walk through the proposed project, familiarize themselves with the required work and ask questions regarding the project. Attendance at this conference and site visit are considered essential to the bidders' understanding of the project elements and a company that does not have a representative in attendance at the pre-bid conference will be considered as a non-responsive bidder.

Sealed Bids must be marked "NMHC IFB2010-R-003". For bidders within the CNMI, an original and three (3) copies of sealed bids must be submitted to the Director, Procurement and Supply, Lower Base, Saipan, no later than 10:00 a.m., local time, Monday, June 07, 2010. Bidders located outside of the CNMI may obtain an additional seven (7) working days for receipt of their bids by submitting a Notice of Intent to Bid. Notices of Intent to Bid must be received by the Director of Procurement and Supply no later than 10:00 a.m., local time, June 07, 2010 and must be transmitted via facsimile to (670) 664-1515 or via e-mail to procurement@pricom.com. For bidders located outside of the CNMI, an original and three (3) copies of sealed bids must be postmarked by the U. S. Postal Service or the official government postal service of a foreign country no later than June 07, 2010, AND must be received by Procurement and Supply no later than June 16, 2010. Note that failure to submit the required number of copies may be cause for rejection of a bid.

Bids will be publicly opened and read aloud at the Division of Procurement and Supply, Lower Base, Saipan, at 10:00 a.m. local time, June 17, 2010. However, if no Notices of Intent to Bid are received from bidders outside of the CNMI, the bids will be opened at 10:00 a.m., local time, June 07, 2010.

For bids greater than Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars ($25,000.00), a bid security of fifteen percent (15%) of the bid amount must accompany the bid. This security may be in the form of a Certified Check, Cashier's Check, or Bid Bond. Checks must be made payable to the Northern Marianas Housing Corporation (NMHC), with the name of the bidder and a notation on the face of the check: "Construction of the Tinian Amphitheater Parking Lot Infiltration System". Surety companies must hold a Certificate of Authority from the U.S. Secretary of the Treasury as an acceptable surety or other surety acceptable to the Attorney General.

The bidder submitting the lowest responsible bid will be subject to a responsibility determination in conformance with the NMIAC §70.30.3.301 of the CNMI Procurement Regulations. The responsible bidder submitting the lowest responsive bid will be awarded a contract with NMHC and will be required to deliver Performance and Payment Bonds, each equal to 100% of the contract price for contracts greater than $25,000. Pursuant to Governor's Directive 251 dated March 15, 2006, bidders are required to include a Clearance from the Office of the Insurance Commissioner with respect to the financial bonding capability of the bidders' chosen Surety. In addition, the contractor will be required to deliver a certification from the bonding company that the unencumbered value of its assets (exclusive of all outstanding commitments or other bond obligations) exceeded the penal amount of each bond.

Performance time for completion of this project is ninety (90) calendar days upon issuance of an official written Notice to Proceed. Liquidated damages for the delays beyond the established completion date will be assessed at Five Hundred Dollars (US$500.00) per calendar day.

This project is funded by a grant from the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), under its Community Development Block Grant, American Recovery and Reinvestment (CDBG-R) funding provided to the Commonwealth that mandates ALL MATERIALS PURCHASED AND INCORPORATED INTO THE BUILDING/WORK MUST BE MANUFACTURED OR PRODUCED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

This project which goal is to provide economic stimulus as well as jobs creation is also subject to Section 3 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1968 which requires recipients of HUD funds and the contractors to help insure that the economic opportunities generated by these HUD funds are provided to local low-income residents and the businesses that serve them "to the maximum extent feasible."

NMHC hereby notifies bidders that it will affirmatively insure that in any contract entered into pursuant to this advertisement, women and small business enterprises will be afforded full opportunity to submit proposals and will not be discriminated against on grounds of race, color, national origin, political affiliation, creed, sex, religion, age, familial status, and disability status.

The Government reserves the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive any defects in the said proposals, if in the sole opinion of NMHC, to do so would be in its best interest. All proposals will become the property of the Government.

BP's own probe finds safety issues on Atlantis rig

HOUSTON (AP)—The company whose drilling triggered the Gulf of Mexico oil spill also owns a rig that operated with incomplete and inaccurate engineering documents, which one official warned could “lead to catastrophic operator error,” records and interviews show.

In February, two months before the Deepwater Horizon spill, 19 members of Congress called on the agency that oversees offshore oil drilling to investigate a whistle-blower's complaints about the BP-owned Atlantis, which is stationed in 7,070 feet of water more than 150 miles south of New Orleans.

The Associated Press has learned that an independent firm hired by BP substantiated the complaints in 2009 and found that the giant petroleum company was violating its own policies by not having completed engineering documents on board the Atlantis when it began operating in 2007.

Stanley Sporkin, a for-

mer federal judge whose firm served as BP's ombudsman, said that the allegation “was substantiated, and that's it.” The firm was hired by BP in 2006 to act as an independent office to receive and investigate employee complaints.

Engineering documents—covering everything from safety shutdown systems to blowout preventers—are meant to be roadmaps for safely starting and halting production on the huge offshore platform.

Running an oil rig with flawed and missing documentation is like cooking a dinner without a complete recipe, said University of California, Berkeley engineering professor Robert Bea, an oil pipeline expert who has been reviewing the whistle-blower allegations and studied the Gulf blowout.

“This is symptomatic of a sick system. This kind of sloppiness is what leads to disasters,” he said. “The sloppiness on the industry side and on the government side. It's a shared problem.”

BP and the Minerals and Management Service, which regulates oil drilling, did not respond to calls from the AP seeking comment on the whistle-blower allegations.

Obama wants light on Wall Street's shadowy deals

WASHINGTON (AP)—Closer watch over Wall Street will help consumers make better informed choices about investing and shine light on the shadowy deals that caused the financial crisis, President Barack Obama said Saturday in pushing Congress to pass overhaul legislation.

In his weekly radio and Internet address, Obama said the bill also would curb predatory lending practices, prevent banks from taking on too much risk and give shareholders more of a say.

“Put simply, Wall Street reform will bring greater security to folks on Main Street,” the president said. “My responsibility as president isn't just to help our economy rebound from this recession; it's to make sure an economic crisis like the one that helped trigger this recession never happens again,” he said. “That's what Wall Street reform will help us do.”

The Senate is debating the broadest rewrite of the rules governing Wall Street since the Great Depression. A final vote is possible as early as the coming week. The bill would then have to be merged with the House's version.

The legislation would set up a mechanism to watch out for risks in the financial system, create a method to liquidate large failing firms and write new rules for complex securities blamed for helping precipitate the 2008 economic crisis. It also would create a new consumer protection agency, a key point for Obama.

The Senate version calls for an independent bureau within the Federal Reserve to write and enforce regulations that would police lending, while the House bill has a stand-alone agency.

Thousands of nonprofits may lose tax-exempt status

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—More than 200,000 small nonprofits across the nation are days away from losing their tax-exempt status because they haven't filed a new form with the Internal Revenue Service.

Many of these groups already operate on razor-thin budgets and some worry an unexpected tax bill could force organizations to close.

“The nonprofits in your backyards, some of them are going to be gone,” said Suzanne Coffman, a spokeswoman for GuideStar, which tracks data on nonprofits.

It's most likely the nonprofits aren't aware of the Monday deadline that only applies to groups that report $25,000 or less in income, excluding churches. Those organizations may not find out until Jan. 1, 2011, when they're notified they have to pay taxes on donations they thought were exempt. And it could be months before their nonprofit status is restored.

Congress required the form, called a 990-N, when it amended the tax code three years ago and groups with a fiscal year ending Dec. 31 had until Monday to meet the deadline.

The Urban Institute's National Center for Charitable Statistics, which conducts economic and social policy research, estimated Friday that 214,000 nonprofit organizations haven't filed the form as required.

BP confident latest try to capture oil will work

ROBERT, La. (AP)—BP was confident Saturday its latest experiment using a mile-long pipe would capture much of the oil flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, even as the company disclosed yet another setback in the environmental disaster.

Engineers hit a snag when they tried to connect two pieces of equipment a mile below the water's surface. BP PLC chief operating officer Doug Suttles said one piece of equipment, called the framework, had to be brought to the water's surface so that adjustments could be made to where it fits with the long tube that connects to a tanker above.

The framework holds a pipe and stopper, and engineers piloting submarine robots will try to use it to plug the massive leak and send the crude through the lengthy pipe to the surface.

"The frame shifted, so they were unable to make that connection," said Suttles, who believes the adjustments will make the device work.

At least 210,000 gallons of oil has been gushing into the Gulf of Mexico since an oil rig exploded April 20 and sank two days later. Eleven people were killed in the blast.

BP's latest idea seems to have the best chance for success so far, said Ed Overton, a LSU professor of environmental studies. At the surface this would be easy, Overton said, but using robots in 5,000 feet of water with oil gushing out of the pipe makes things much more difficult.

"It's something like threading the eye of a needle. But that can be tough to do up here. And you can imagine how hard it would be to do it down there with a robot," Overton said.

The tube could capture more than three-quarters of the leak; BP also must contend with a smaller leak that's farther away. If the tube works, it would be the first time the company has been able to capture any of the oil before it fouls the Gulf waters.

A week ago, the company tried to put

A Coast Guard plane flies over the Development Driller III oil drilling platform which is drilling a relief well at the site of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico off the coast of Louisiana Wednesday, May 12, 2010.

Oil spill update

Forecasted location of the sunken rig oil spill:

a massive box over the leak, but ice-like crystals formed and BP scrapped that plan.

BP is also drilling a relief well that is considered the permanent solution to stopping the leak. It's about halfway done and still months away from being completed. The company also is still considering using a smaller containment dome known as a "top hat," as well as a "junk shot," in which golf balls and rubber would be inserted to try to clog the leak.

Meanwhile, BP began spraying undersea dispersants at that leak site and said the chemicals appear to have reduced the amount of surface oil.

This unprecedented use of chemical dispersants underwater, and the depth of the leak has created many unknowns regarding environmental impact, and researchers hurriedly worked to chart its effects.

Researchers from the National Institute for Undersea Science and Technology reported this week that they had detected large oil plumes from just beneath the surface of the sea to more than 4,000 feet deep.

Researchers Vernon Asper and Arne Dierks said in Web posts that the plumes were "perhaps due to the deep injection of dispersants which BP has stated that they are conducting."

Three or four large plumes have been found, at least one that is 10 miles long and a mile wide, said Samantha Joye, a marine science professor supporting the mission from her University of Georgia lab.

Episcopal church ordains its 2nd openly gay bishop

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Seven years after the Episcopal Church caused an uproar by consecrating its first openly gay bishop, it has done the same thing again—only this time with a woman.

The Rev. Canon Mary Glasspool, of Baltimore, was ordained and consecrated on Saturday, making her the second openly gay bishop in church history and one of the first two female bishops in the Diocese of Los Angeles' 114-year history.

She was installed at Long Beach Arena before 3,000 people, who burst into applause at the end, church spokesman Bob Williams said.

Just before the ceremony began, a man stood, shouted about the need to repent and held up a sign that read "Do not be deceived, homosexuals will not inherit the kingdom of God."

After he was escorted out, a young boy in the same section rose holding a Bible and shouted similar slogans. Security guards also led him out.

The Rev. Canon Diane M. Jardine Bruce, of San Clemente, Calif., was also ordained Saturday.

The two women were elected last December to serve as assistant bishops in the diocese's six-county territory but conservative Episcopalians had urged the church not to ordain Glasspool. The decision to do so highlights a continued Episcopal commitment to accepting same-sex relationships despite enormous pressure from other Anglicans.

Bishop Jon Bruno, who gave a sermon at the ceremony, said he once opposed ordaining women, but now would be happily serving alongside two. Bruno defended the church's inclusive policies.

"The world's transformed only if we turn to each and every one of our brothers and sisters and see the face of Christ superimposed on them," he told the audience. "The ones we disagree with most are the ones we're obligated to share our lives and teach the most."

The Episcopal Church, which is the Anglican body in the United States, caused turmoil in the church in 2003 by consecrating the first openly gay bishop, V. Gene Robinson of New Hampshire.

Palin joins Arizona gov. to defend immigration law

PHOENIX (AP)—As calls spread for an economic boycott of Arizona, the state's governor enlisted the help of former vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin on Saturday to defend a new law cracking down on illegal immigration.

Palin

Jan Brewer and Palin blamed President Barack Obama for the state law, saying the measure is Arizona's attempt to enforce immigration laws because the federal government won't do it.

"It's time for Americans across this great country to stand up and say, 'We're all Arizonans now,'" Palin said. "And in clear unison we say, 'Mr. President: Do your job. Secure our border.'"

The former Alaska governor appeared with Brewer at a brief news conference on Saturday. The event launched a website that Brewer said was an effort to educate America about border security and discourage an economic boycott of the state.

The site, funded by Brewer's re-election campaign, shows pictures of Brewer and Palin and invites visitors to sign a petition opposing boycotts. It includes a list of politicians and organizations calling for the boycotts and asks visitors to call or e-mail to "let them know that you support Arizona."

"Our purpose today is to help the rest of the nation understand the crisis which confronts our state," Brewer said, citing the presence of human and drug smugglers.

The immigration law takes effect July 29 unless blocked by pending court challenges. It requires police enforcing another law to ask a person about his or her immigration status if there's "reasonable suspicion" that the person is in the country illegally. Being in the country illegally would become a state crime.

"I think for most American people the reaction to this would be, 'Why haven't the police already been doing that?'" Palin said.

Obama and some city, state and foreign governments have condemned the law, which critics say will lead to racial profiling of Hispanics. Brewer on Saturday reiterated her assertion that profiling is illegal and will not be tolerated.

"The president apparently considers it a wonderful opportunity to divide people along racial lines for his personal political convenience," Brewer said.

Police: Sheriff's deputy in WA shoots in-laws

GIG HARBOR, Wash. (AP)—A sheriff's deputy accused of fatally shooting his wife's parents was found dead in his Gig Harbor, Wash., home early Saturday, after an hours-long standoff with police, authorities said. SWAT team members reported that 49-year-old Pierce County Deputy Allen Myron was dead when they entered the house more than six hours after the standoff began, Tacoma police Detective Gretchen Aguirre told The Associated Press. The SWAT team surrounding the house heard a single gunshot around 10 p.m. Friday, but did not enter the house at that time, Aguirre said. Myron's body was discovered shortly before 2 a.m. Saturday. Aguirre said she didn't know how Myron died.

Phoenix hospital nun rebuked for allowing abortion

PHOENIX (AP)—A nun and administrator at a Catholic hospital in Phoenix has been reassigned and rebuked by the local bishop for agreeing that a severely ill woman needed an abortion to survive. Sister Margaret McBride was on an ethics committee that included doctors that consulted with a young woman who was 11 weeks pregnant late last year, The Arizona Republic newspaper reported on its website Saturday. The woman was suffering from a life-threatening condition that likely would have caused her death if she hadn't had the abortion at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center. Hospital officials defended McBride's actions but confirmed that she has been reassigned from her job as vice president of mission integration at the hospital. They said in a statement that saving the mother required that the fetus be aborted.

NY agency: 600-plus cabbies repeatedly overcharged

NEW YORK (AP)—Hundreds of New York City cab drivers accused of repeatedly overcharging passengers will face a special tribunal. The city's Taxi and Limousine Commission on Friday issued the results of a monthlong probe into data revealing elevated meter-based charges over the past two years. The agency said 88 drivers each overcharged clients at least 500 times, while 545 more did so 50 to 499 times. Some could lose their licenses, while others with up to 49 overcharges face fines of as much as $5,000.

Aquino: No oath before RP chief justice

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—The Philippines' president-apparent Benigno Aquino III refused Friday to take an oath of office before the new chief justice, alleging impropriety in the appointment by the outgoing president in the dying days of her term.

The move would be a symbolic first blow against the scandal-tainted President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo if Aquino takes office.

The son of Philippine democracy icons questioned Arroyo's appointment on Wednesday of Supreme Court Chief Justice Renato Corona, who was her chief of staff and spokesman. Aquino cited constitutional prohibitions on appointments two months before the end of a president's term, but a majority of Supreme Court judges ruled in March the two-month ban does not apply to the position of chief justice.

"I do not want my own oath-taking, if I do it, to be before a questioned entity," he told reporters in his northern home province of Tarlac.

He said instead he may be sworn in by a village chief in Tarlac on June 30 at the end of Arroyo's term.

Thai PM considering curfew after 25 die in clashes

BANGKOK (AP)—Thailand's leader warned violence was on the rise after three days of rolling street battles in the heart of Bangkok and hinted Sunday that a curfew may be imposed on the sprawling metropolis of more than 10 million people.

Schools were also ordered shut Monday due to the violence that has killed 25 people since a military operation began Thursday to seal off a 1-square-mile protest camp occupied for weeks by anti-government demonstrators demanding early elections.

Speaking on his weekly television program, Prime Minister Abhisit Vejjajiva insisted that the military operation to quell protests was the answer in ending the country's two-month-long crisis.

"Overall, I insist the best way to prevent losses is to stop the protest. The protest creates conditions for violence to occur. We do realize at the moment that the role of armed groups is increasing each day," he said.

He said a meeting was being held to discuss a possible curfew. Abhisit said he had asked the education minister to postpone the beginning of a new school semester, due to begin Monday, for a week.

Officials: US missiles kill 5 in NW Pakistan

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP)—A suspected U.S. missile strike killed at least five people in the Khyber tribal region of northwest Pakistan on Saturday, in what would be one of the first such attacks in the area, intelligence and government officials said. U.S. missiles have regularly pounded al-Qaida and Taliban targets along the Afghan border for two years now. The attacks have killed scores of people, most of them identified as militants by Pakistani officials. But they have caused anger in Pakistan, where many people see them as an unacceptable violation of the country's sovereignty. The suspected strike in the remote Teerah Valley of Khyber could fan fresh anger because it represented a widening of the covert program.

HK election aims to pressure Beijing for democracy

HONG KONG (AP)—Hong Kongers voted Sunday in territory-wide special elections triggered by five opposition legislators who resigned in the hopes of pressuring Beijing to implement full democracy in this former British colony. The five former lawmakers, who represent each of Hong Kong's five major electoral districts, quit in January with the intention of setting up a showdown against pro-Beijing candidates that will serve as a de facto referendum on democracy. While Hong Kong has continued to enjoy Western-style civil liberties under Chinese rule, its top leader is picked by a committee stacked with Beijing loyalists and its 60-member legislature is half-elected, half chosen by interest groups. Beijing has condemned the democracy activists' campaign and Hong Kong's leading pro-China political par-

NKorean navy boats violate sea border amid tension

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—Two North Korean naval boats briefly crossed the tense western sea border with South Korea in the first such violation since a South Korean warship sank in the area following a mysterious explosion in March, the South's military said Sunday. A North Korean patrol boat sailed about 1.6 miles (2.8 kilometers) into the South-controlled waters on Saturday night but quickly retreated after a South Korean broadcast warning, according to Seoul's Joint Chiefs of Staff. In less than an hour, another North Korean patrol boat intruded across the border but returned to its waters after another warning broadcast and two shots from the South Korean vessel, a Joint Chiefs of Staff officer said on condition of anonymity citing department policy. There were no injuries reported, he added.

Bittersweet return for Dutch boy crash survivor

AMSTERDAM (AP)—The 9-year-old Dutch boy who miraculously survived a plane crash in Libya returned to the Netherlands aboard an airborne ambulance Saturday and was whisked away to a hospital in his hometown, where he must begin to rebuild his life without his parents or brother.

Ruben van Assouw was the sole survivor, pulled unconscious from the wreckage of an Afriqiyah Airways jetliner that plunged into the desert less than a mile from (a kilometer short of) the runway in Tripoli on Wednesday, killing 103 people.

Investigators from the U.S.

and other countries were on the scene of the crash near the Libyan capital Saturday trying to determine a cause. Others began identifying the dead, who include 70 Dutch nationals.

Ruben returned with an aunt and uncle aboard a flight to a military air base in Eindhoven, then was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in nearby Tilburg, the hometown of the Van Assouws. Patrick, 40, Trudy, 41, and their son Enzo died in the crash.

Ruben underwent more than four hours of surgery to repair multiple fractures to his legs Wednesday, but doctors say he has been recovering well.

A statement by close relatives said the extended family will care for Ruben, and asked the media not to contact them while they are grieving. Ruben was shielded from the media at the air base and hospital.

It was not yet clear where he will live, though much of the family, including grandparents, lives in Tilburg.

"Let's make sure he can catch his breath peacefully in the arms of relatives," Tilburg mayor Ivo Opstelten said on Dutch television. The boy and his relatives need to find "a kind of balance with each other, so they can start sketching a future."

Candidates threatened in local Mexico elections

MEXICO CITY (AP)—One candidate was gunned down with his son inside his business. Another is missing after assailants torched her home. In some towns near the U.S. border, parties can't find anyone to run for mayor.

The violence is intensifying fear that Mexico's drug cartels could control July 4 local elections in 10 states by supporting candidates who cooperate with organized crime and killing or intimidating those who don't.

Nowhere has the intimidation been worse than in the border state of Tamaulipas, where Mexican soldiers are trying to control an intensifying turf battle between the Gulf cartel and its former ally, the Zetas gang.

Gunmen burst into the farm supplies business of Jose Guajardo Varela Thursday and killed him and his son, after he ignored warnings to drop his bid for mayor of Valle Hermosa, a town about 30 miles (50 kilometers) south of Brownsville, Texas.

"Organized crime wants to have total control over local elections," said Carlos Alberto Perez, a federal lawmaker for Calderon's conservative National Action Party, known as the PAN.

On Saturday, authorities said former Mexican presidential candidate Diego Fernandez de Cevallos had disappeared, and his abandoned car was found near his ranch in the central state of Queretaro.

UK, Germany eye possible ash travel disruptions

LONDON (AP)—Volcanic ash from Iceland could disrupt air travel in both Britain and Germany in the next few days, officials said Saturday.

The British Department of Transport said there was a risk that parts of British airspace could be closed beginning Sunday and those problems could continue through Tuesday. The predictions are based on the continuing eruption of Iceland's Eyjafjallajökull volcano and current wind and weather conditions.

It said different parts of British airspace—including England's southeast, home to Europe's busiest airport at Heathrow as well as Gatwick, Stansted and other top airports—could close at different times through the next few days.

In Germany, air traffic control spokesman Axel Raab told The Associated Press that German air travel could face possible disruptions starting Monday but cautioned that indicators were still "very, very vague."

Germany will send up a test flight Sunday to measure the ash concentration, German Aerospace Center spokesman Andreas Schuetz said—a measure welcomed by Lufthansa, Germany's largest airline, which last month criticized air traffic authorities for their lack of ash testing.

More children's jewelry recalls in works

By JUSTIN PRITCHARD
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Federal regulators are expanding their investigation into children's jewelry that contains the toxic metal cadmium, promising that a recall announced Monday of "Best Friends" charm bracelets will not be the last.

"More recalls are in the works," U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission spokesman Scott Wolfson said.

Those recalls would be the result of voluntary testing by companies, some of which have found troubling levels of cadmium and then reported those results to the agency, Wolfson said. He would not say how many products are under scrutiny.

In addition, in recent weeks agency inspectors working at 10 of the nation's largest ports have screened imports of jewelry for cadmium. In one instance, a shipment of Chinese jewelry was turned away.

Word of expanded federal efforts came as the consumer safety agency announced the voluntary recall of about 19,000 "Best Friends" charm bracelet sets made in China and sold exclusively at the jewelry and accessories store Claire's, which has more than 3,000 outlets in North America and Europe.

"Cadmium is toxic if ingested by children and can cause adverse health effects," the agency said in its recall announcement. Medical research shows that cadmium in high levels is a known carcinogen and can harm kidneys and bones.

Agency scientists confirmed independent test results that were first reported in an Associated Press investigation in January, which showed high levels of cadmium in the "Best Friends" bracelet.

The recall pertains only to items previously sold at Claire's; several days after AP's initial investigation became public, the chain said it would immediately stop selling them.

While the CPSC did not release its results, testing done for the AP revealed that bracelets sold at Claire's contained up to 91 percent cadmium by weight, and shed alarming amounts during a test that examined how much cadmium children might be exposed to if they accidentally swallow one of the charms.

Consumers should take the

bracelets away from children and return them to Claire's for a replacement or refund, according to the announcement. The bracelets sold for about $12.

The CPSC identified the manufacturer as Dae Yeon Industries Corp., of China. Claire's said Monday that it has stopped further shipments from the company.

The recall was the third prompted by AP's reporting. Before this year, no consumer product in the United States had been recalled because of cadmium.

"Within weeks of these reports, Claire's Stores added procedures requiring all of its suppliers to test for cadmium in children's jewelry," the company said in a statement. "Claire's Stores has taken significant steps to ensure that its products meet or exceed all existing safety standards and has responded swiftly and decisively to address the potential risk of cadmium in children's jewelry."

The reference to existing safety standards reflects the fact that, unlike with lead, federal law sets no specific levels for how much cadmium is permissible in children's jewelry. Federal regulators are operating under generic powers they have to remove hazardous items from commerce, and Claire's urged the agency to set clearer standards.

In the meantime, states from California to Connecticut have started to act.

Last week in Illinois, for instance, the Legislature passed a bill to limit cadmium in children's jewelry that roughly follows a regulatory approach now used for cadmium in toys. That bill is on its way to the governor's desk.

Representatives of jewelry importers and manufacturers have rejected the idea that children's metal jewelry is unsafe.

Michael Gale, executive director of the Fashion Jewelry and Accessories Trade Association, has told several state legislatures that are considering strict limits on cadmium in jewelry that if those laws pass, it might be impossible to put any children's jewelry on store shelves where those laws apply. In an interview Monday, he endorsed the approach that Illinois took.

At the nation's ports, federal product safety screeners are now using special guns that shoot X-rays into jewelry to estimate how much cadmium each item might contain. Samples of items with high initial results—dozens so far—have been sent to the CPSC's headquarters for detailed lab testing.

In one instance, a shipment of Chinese jewelry shed high levels of cadmium when put through the test that mimics how much would enter the body if accidentally swallowed, agency spokesman Wolfson said. That shipment was then "re-exported" - which under U.S. law doesn't mean it had to be sent back to China.

Sixteen-year-old Jessica Watson works with the rigging as she sails past the finish line at the entrance to Sydney Harbour in Sydney, Australia, Saturday, May 15, 2010, capping off a nearly 23,000 nautical mile voyage that many thought she wouldn't survive.

Australian finishes round-the-world sail at age 16

SYDNEY (AP) — A 16-year-old Australian who braved boat knockdowns and seven months of solitude on a sail around the world set foot on dry land outside the Sydney Opera House on Saturday and quickly set an earthier goal: getting her driver's license.

Jessica Watson became the youngest person to sail around the globe solo, nonstop and unassisted when she cruised into Sydney Harbour in her pink, 34-foot (10-meter) yacht to a rock star welcome of thousands. She successfully maneuvered her boat through raging storms, 40-foot (12-meter) waves and seven knockdowns during the 23,000 nautical mile journey that critics thought she wouldn't survive.

After standing on land for the first time in 210 days, the teen said she's eager to learn how to drive a car, to eat fresh fruit and salad after months of packaged meals, get a full night's sleep instead of catnaps and shake off her sea legs with a long walk on the beach.

"You will pass your driving test with flying colors," Prime Minister Kevin Rudd assured Watson, who giggled along with a crowd of thousands of her fans, many wearing pink or waving pink flags in honor of her yacht, Ella's Pink Lady.

It was a lighthearted moment in an emotional day for the teen, who admitted she was overwhelmed by the attention after so much solitude. Minutes earlier, she had wept with relief after stepping off the yacht and into the arms of her tearful parents, whose decision to let their daughter attempt the feat was dubbed an act of insanity by some.

"People don't think you're capable of these things—they don't realize what young people, what 16-year-olds and girls are capable of," Watson told the crowd. "It's amazing when you take away those expectations what you can do."

Watson, from Buderim, north of Brisbane in Queensland state, sailed out of Sydney on Oct. 18 despite protests by critics that she was too immature and inexperienced for the treacherous journey. Her parents maintained that she was well-prepared and noted she has been sailing since age 8.

"She said she'd sail around the world, and she has," a tearful Julie Watson said from a nearby boat as she watched her grinning daughter cruise past the finish line. "She's home."

Watson sailed northeast through the South Pacific and across the equator, south to Cape Horn at the tip of South America, across the Atlantic Ocean to South Africa, through the Indian Ocean and around southern Australia.

Her feat will not be considered an official world record, because the World Speed Sailing Record Council discontinued its "youngest" category.

Australian Jesse Martin holds the record for the youngest person to sail around the world solo, nonstop and unassisted, after he completed the journey in 1999 at the age of 18.

Martin boarded Watson's boat to take over during her cruise toward the Opera House, so she could relax and wave to fans. Watson was given a goodie bag that included Tim Tams—chocolate cookies popular in Australia—and a can of whipped cream, which she partially injected into her mouth before laughing and turning away from the cameras.

She was also joined on board by Britain's Mike Perham, who completed a solo circumnavigation at the age of 17 in 2009, though technical problems forced him to stop for assistance.

Some sailing enthusiasts also argue Watson didn't travel far enough north of the equator for her journey to count as a true round-the-world sail as defined by the record council's rules. Watson's managers have dismissed those claims and argued she doesn't need to adhere to the council's rules anyway, since they won't be recognizing her voyage.

The route took Watson through some of the world's most treacherous waters, and the teen battled through monstrous storms. She said those times gave her moments of doubt, but generally she kept her spirits up.

"Amazingly, I just enjoyed it much, much more than I ever thought I would and handled the challenges better than I thought," she told journalists. "You don't actually have a choice—you're in the middle of a storm, you're being knocked down—you can't fall apart."

Her journey was also peppered with beauty. On her blog, she described stunning sunrises over glassy seas, the excitement of spotting a blue whale and the dazzling, eerie sight of a shooting star racing across the night sky above her boat.

Case closed: 'Law & Order' is canceled by NBC

NEW YORK (AP)—There was never any doubt that, someday, "Law & Order" would come to an end.

But the death sentence handed down by NBC on Friday caught many observers by surprise. Viewers weren't prepared to say farewell to this beloved TV warhorse. Not this way, with this sort of abruptness. And not with it on the brink of entering the history book as TV's longest-running drama.

What had been intended as the 20th-season finale, a solid but unexceptional episode, will air May 24 as the series conclusion. This would seem an injustice to the show's proud legacy. And an unceremonious end for its fans.

Maybe there weren't enough fans

Michael Jackson doctor helps passenger in distress

PHOENIX (AP)—The doctor accused of administering a powerful anesthetic that killed pop star Michael Jackson helped stabilize a young woman who fell unconscious on a US Airways jet on Saturday.

Dr. Conrad Murray found the woman with a very weak pulse aboard Flight 641 from Houston, hooked her up to an IV line he got from the plane's medical bag and monitored her while the jet was diverted to Albuquerque, N.M., his spokeswoman said.

"We're not surprised," said Miranda Sevcik, from the legal team representing Murray in his involuntary manslaughter case. "He's a good doctor, we've always said he was a good doctor, and that's what good doctors do is save people."

The young woman, who Murray said was 23 and traveling with an 11-month-old baby, was met at the gate by paramedics and taken to a hospital, Sevcik said. The plane then continued on to Phoenix. Murray was on his way to Los Angeles to confer with his lawyers at the time.

tient who had a medical emergency. Spokesman Todd Lehmacher said it was against company policy to identify the passenger or the doctor on board who helped stabilize her.

Murray's involvement was first reported by celebrity website TMZ.com.

Jackson, 50, was about to launch a world comeback tour when he died last June after being found unresponsive with Murray at his bedside in a Beverly Hills mansion. Murray had been hired at $150,000 a month to be Jackson's personal physician.

Murray told police he administered the anesthetic propofol to Jackson as a treatment for insomnia.

Conrad, 57, was charged in February with a felony charge of involuntary manslaughter.

He has pleaded not guilty, and remains free on $75,000 bail pending trial.

The cardiologist has offices in Houston and Las Vegas. His license to practice medicine in California has been restricted by a judge and he is fighting to maintain his license in Las Vegas, where back child support could result in its suspension.

(this season, viewership has averaged 7.3 million viewers, the show's lowest ever and less than half the number at its height a decade ago). Maybe the show was too expensive to produce. Maybe NBC just thought it was too old.

Even so, "Law & Order" had been considered a TV fixture and a good shot for renewal next season. Then it would be poised to surpass "Gunsmoke," a CBS western that ran 20 seasons from 1955 to 1975.

That record-breaking feat has been an enduring dream of the series' creator, Dick Wolf, who not only furnished NBC with this so-called "mother ship" but expanded it into two successful "Law & Order" spinoffs. He also will shepherd the just-announced "LOLA" (short for "Law & Order: Los Angeles") premiering this fall.

Jeff Gaspin, chairman of NBC Universal Television, praised Wolf on Friday and said the legacy of "Law & Order" will "continue to make an impact like no other series before."

Wolf declined comment, other than to say in a statement, "Never complain, never explain."

In its latest incarnation, the show's ensemble cast consisted of Jeremy Sisto, Anthony Anderson, Linus Roache, Alana De La Garza, Sam Waterston (who joined in 1994) and S. Epatha Merkerson, who, unrelated to the show's termination, had already announced she was moving on after 16 seasons.

"Oh, it'll be renewed, it'll definitely be renewed," Merkerson said earlier this week, sounding confident the show would continue even after she was gone.

These actors have followed in the footsteps of no fewer than 19 other stars who have filled the show's half-dozen slots for cops and prosecutors since "Law & Order" began.

The series premiered on Sept. 13, 1990. It was thought to be unusually raw and authentic in how each episode followed the twists and turns of a case, which often dealt with pressing social issues seldom addressed by TV drama.

It had an unusual structure, too. For the first half-hour, detectives tracked down the bad guy. In the second half, prosecutors hauled the accused into court.

The stories were said to be ripped from the headlines, with New York City the show's true star. Largely shot on the streets of New York, it had a striking look at a time when only one other scripted series, "The Cosby Show," originated from New York.

"Over the last 20 years, 'Law & Order' became a New York City institution," said New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg in a statement on Friday. Noting that "it began filming in the city at a time when few series did," he thanked Wolf for "helping showcase the city's depth and versatility as a setting."

LA DA meets actress who claims Polanski sex abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Los Angeles County prosecutors have met with a British actress who claims she was sexually abused by director Roman Polanski in his Paris apartment when she was 16—years before she appeared in one of his movies.

Charlotte Lewis, 42, said Friday that the filmmaker abused her "in the worst possible way" sometime in the 1980s.

Lewis provided no evidence to support her claims, and her attorney, Gloria Allred, did not permit her to answer questions during a news conference in her office.

However, Allred said the woman provided evidence to a police detective and officials from the Los Angeles County district attorney's office. She refused to provide specifics and also refused to answer questions about whether her client's allegations involved drugs or rape.

"Our detectives did conduct the interview but the department has not begun an investigation," said police spokesman Richard French. He did not know when the interview was conducted.

It was unclear what year the alleged assault took place.

"He took advantage of me and I have lived with the effects of his behavior ever since it occurred," said Lewis, reading from a prepared statement at a news conference in her lawyer's office. "All I want is justice."

Allred said that, to her knowledge, no criminal complaint or lawsuit was made in France over the alleged assault.

The duty officer for the French Justice Ministry said late Friday night that he was not aware whether the British actress had filed a complaint in France about her allegation.

A statement released by Polanski's U.S. legal team said his attorneys had no information about the allegations that were made at the press conference "but we do know that our district attorney continues to refuse to provide the Swiss government with accurate and complete information relevant to the extradition issue."

Polanski, the Oscar-winning director of "Rosemary's Baby," "Chinatown" and "The Pianist," is under house arrest at his Swiss chateau in connection with a 33-year-old case.

Polanski was accused of drugging a 13-year-old girl with champagne and part of Quaalude and raping her at Jack Nicholson's house in Los Angeles in 1977. He pleaded guilty to unlawful sexual intercourse but fled to France before sentencing and remained a fugitive until Swiss authorities arrested him on Sept. 26 on a U.S. warrant as he arrived in Zurich to receive a lifetime achievement award from a film festival.

Lewis said she came forward because she heard that Polanski was fighting extradition to the United States and "that his legal team is portraying his previous offense against a minor as an isolated instance."

Allred said she doesn't plan any legal action right now, such as a lawsuit, but believes the allegations would be relevant when Polanski is sentenced.

Her client is ready to testify if necessary, she said.

"If the judge believes these claims, it could certainly have an impact on the court's decision," she said.

Lewis played a role in Polanski's 1986 movie, "Pirates." She's also credited with a role in the 1986 movie "The Golden Child" and small roles in other movies and TV shows.

Woody Allen shares tales of love, death at Cannes

CANNES, France (AP)—Love, death, the terrible pitfalls of aging, romance between older men and younger women—they're all part of the Woody Allen canon, whether in his films or when he's just shooting the breeze.

Allen's latest mix of comedy and drama, "You Will Meet a Tall Dark Stranger," premiered Saturday at the Cannes Film Festival, presenting an ensemble of characters dealing with familiar issues at the heart of the filmmaker's 40-some movies.

The film features Naomi Watts, Anthony Hopkins, Antonio Banderas, Josh Brolin, Gemma Jones and Freida Pinto as an ensemble of Londoners coping with failing marriage, stymied ambition, the yearning for new relationships and the fear of mortality.

In a news conference, Allen addressed many of these issues, along with such matters as why he shoots films in London rather than near his home in Manhattan and why he has not costarred in his recent pictures.

■ On aging: "I find it a lousy deal. There's no advantage in getting older. I'm 74 now. You don't get smarter, you don't get wiser, you don't get more mellow, you don't get more kindly.

Nothing good happens. Your back hurts more. You get more indigestion. Your eyesight isn't as good. You need a hearing aid. It's a bad business getting older, and I would advise you not to do it."

■ On May-December romances: "It's a good laugh-getter, and a good provocative kind of thing, so that's really why I use it. ... It gives me something that you can get good situations from and good jokes from."

■ On London: "The films that I make in London I could make in New York. They would just be more expensive to make in New York. It's a pleasure to work in London, because the summers are cool, the skies are gray, good for photography. There are wonderful crews and wonderful actors."

■ On not appearing in his films: "For years, I played the romantic lead, and then I couldn't play it any longer, because I got too old to play it, and it's no fun just not playing the guy who gets the girl. So unless I can think of some way to do it, no. ... You can imagine how frustrating it is when I do these movies with Scarlett Johansson and Naomi Watts, and the other guys get them. And I'm the director. I'm the, you know, that old guy over there is the director. I don't like that. I like being the one that sits across from them in the restaurant and looks in their eyes and lies to them."

■ On death: "My relationship with death remains the same. I am very strongly against it."

"You Will Meet a Tall Dark Stranger," Allen's 10th film at Cannes, spins a convoluted tale of troubled lives as Alfie (Hopkins) becomes obsessed with aging and leaves his wife, Helena (Jones), eventually marrying a young, gold-digging actress-prostitute (Lucy Punch).

Alfie and Helena's daughter, Sally (Watts), supports husband Roy (Brolin) while he struggles to finish a novel that might fulfill the promise of his first published book. Meantime, Roy falls for a beautiful neighbor (Pinto), while Sally develops feelings for her boss (Banderas) at an art gallery. Helena finds comfort from a quarter in which Allen himself places no faith—the prognostications of a fortuneteller. Everyone needs their own little fictions to cope with the harshness of life, he said.

"I do feel that it's a grim, pitiful, nightmarish, meaningless experience," Allen said. "The only way that you can be happy is if you tell yourself some lies and deceive yourself, and I'm not the first person to say this or the most articulate person on it. It was said by Nietzsche, it was said by Freud, it was said by Eugene O'Neill. One must have one's delusions to live. You look at life too honestly and clearly, life does become unbearable, because it's a pretty grim enterprise, you must admit."

Winnie Mandela biopic producer vows to plow ahead

CANNES, France (AP)—Jennifer Hudson's film biography of Winnie Madikizela-Mandela is about to start production, despite threats of legal action by the ex-wife of former South African President Nelson Mandela, the film's producer said Saturday.

Speaking at a news conference at the Cannes Film Festival, Andre Pieterse said he received a letter from lawyers for Madikizela-Mandela that "contained the threat of an interdict that could stop production" of "Winnie."

The letter said that "she would like to see the script and approve," but Pieterse said he and director Darrell Roodt had decided against that. "The film will be made based on a screenplay that was well researched and without any interference, without any influence from any of the main characters."

Production on "Winnie" is slated to begin in South Africa on May 31 and last 10 weeks. No release date has yet been set for the film, which stars another U.S. actor, Terrence Howard, as Nelson Mandela.

Madikizela-Mandela rose to prominence during South Africa's apartheid era, when she led the African National Congress and vigorously campaigned for the release of her husband, who spent 27 years in jail. Their marriage fell apart a few years after his 1990 release.

In 1991, Madikizela-Mandela was sentenced to six years in jail for her role in a kidnapping case. The sentence was reduced to a fine on appeal, but she was later convicted of fraud and theft charges.

Roodt—the South African behind "Cry, the Beloved Country" and "Sarafina!"—sought to downplay the unsavory elements of Madikizela-Mandela's biography, repeatedly calling the Mandelas' relationship "an amazing love story about what one woman will do for her man."

The movie spans most of Madikizela-Mandela's life, following her from her early teens through the present, Roodt said.

"It's not a rose-tinted picture by any stretch of the imagination. However, we contextualize that so you understand where that comes from."

"This is a woman who is just extraordinary beyond all measure and it's high time that a great film is made about a great South African and a great human being who's done so much for not only South Africa but the world," he said. "I shouldn't say this, but I think Winnie's going to love the movie."

Academy Award-winning U.S. actress Hudson said she didn't know much about Madikizela-Mandela before accepting the role, but added she's been reading up on South Africa and on the Mandelas.

"I'm still in the process of learning," she said. "It's not small shoes to fill, it's a big deal. And it's something that I'm extremely excited about."

NEW YORK (AP)—Lena Horne, whose signature song was "Stormy Weather," was remembered at her funeral on Friday as a shy girl from Brooklyn who fought racism for decades to emerge as a world-class singer and social activist.

"She was so many ideas existing all at the same time in the same space and they were all conflicting and they were all true," her granddaughter, Jenny Lumet, told hundreds of mourners at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola in Manhattan.

They included fellow entertainers Chita Rivera, Diahann Carroll, Dionne Warwick, Cicely Tyson and Jinji Nicole.

"I've tried to sum her up and I can't sum her up," said Lumet, daughter of director Sidney Lumet. "To sum something up means it's over—and I think that she's not over and that she's quite infinite."

Horne, who died Sunday at 92, was one of the first black performers hired to sing with Charlie Barnet's white orchestra in the early 1940s, playing the Copacabana nightclub in New York City. When she signed with MGM, she was one of the rare black actors to have a contract with a major Hollywood studio.

In 1943, MGM lent Horne to 20th Century Fox to play the lead role in the all-black movie musical "Stormy Weather." Her rendition of the title song became a major hit—reflecting the ups and downs of her life, which included a second marriage to Lennie Hayton, a Jewish musician working for MGM with whom she shared the social pressures of being an interracial couple.

For years, Horne entertained white audiences with her impressive musical range, from blues and jazz to such Rodgers and Hart songs as "The Lady Is a Tramp" and "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered." But she was often not allowed to socialize with whites, especially in the segregated South.

"I was unique in that I was a kind of black that white people could accept," she once told an interviewer. "I was their daydream. I had the worst kind of acceptance because it was never for how great I was or what I contributed."

Horne plunged into activism after 1945, when she performed at an Army base and saw German prisoners of war sitting in front while black American soldiers were consigned to the rear.

Aging members of the so-called Tuskegee Airmen, a group of black World War II pilots, attended the funeral.

Among them was Roscoe Brown Jr., who commanded an Air Force squadron and now directs the Center for Urban Education Policy at the City University of New York.

"This wonderful, beautiful lady, Lena Horne, came to visit us," he told mourners. "She sang, she talked with us and she made us all her boyfriends."

The men took her picture "and put it on our barracks, on our planes, and she became our pinup girl," he said.

During the two-hour funeral, former New York City Mayor David Dinkins and U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Georgia, also delivered eulogies for a woman who was blacklisted in the 1950s for her activism and unable to perform.

But she emerged a major cultural figure, capped by her 1981 one-woman Broadway show, "Lena Horne: The Lady and Her Music," which won a special Tony for the fierce passion of her truths in music.

In Washington on Friday, U.S. Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand, D-N.Y., paid tribute to Horne by introducing a bipartisan Senate resolution that passed unanimously, recognizing the Brooklyn native's legacy as a Hollywood trailblazer and civil rights activist.

Horne's funeral was held in the Upper East Side church where she brought her family each Easter for years.

Bret Michaels announces May 28 return to stage

NEW YORK (AP)—Bret Michaels is set to return to the stage a little more than a month after suffering a brain hemorrhage.

His representative announced Friday that the rocker and reality star would perform at the Hard Rock Live in Biloxi, Miss., on May 28.

Michaels has been sidelined since April. On April 12, he had an emergency appendectomy. Ten days later he suffered the hemorrhage that left him in intensive care for two weeks in a Phoenix hospital.

Many of his concert dates were postponed, but they are being rescheduled. Michaels also is set to begin a tour with Lynyrd Skynyrd on June 10 in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Michaels—who has been in rehabilitation since the hemorrhage—is hoping to return to New York to compete on NBC's "Celebrity Apprentice." He will appear on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" on Wednesday.

Chicago suburbs honor their own 'American Idol'

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILL. (AP)—A parade with cheerleaders and a high school marching band helped welcome "American Idol" finalist Lee Dewyze back to his suburban Chicago hometown Friday. He later sang to tens of thousands of people at a nearby concert.

At least 30,000 tickets were given away for the concert at Arlington Park Racetrack. Fans throughout the crowd were clad in neon yellow "Vote 4 Lee" T-shirts.

Dewyze, at times emotional, appeared overwhelmed by the outpouring at the show. The 24-year-old paint store clerk thanked fans for supporting his appearance on the Fox talent competition.

"This is the best day of my life," he told the crowd, who heard him perform renditions of "Hey Jude," "The Boxer" and the Dave Matthews Band song "Crash."

On stage, Dewyze received the key to the city of Mount Prospect, his hometown.

Mount Prospect Mayor Irvana Wilks said earlier that when she first saw him perform on "American Idol," she thought, "Oh my gosh, we need to get ready."

The town was ready Friday with a parade that drew hundreds of cheering fans. Dewyze waved to the crowds from the back of a black convertible.

"That raspy voice just sends chills up your spine," said Margie Torphy, 52, a Mount Prospect resident along the route who said she used to buy paint from him.

Twelve-year-old Olivia Karnes of Mount Prospect showed up at the parade with her family.

"He has an amazing voice. It's really unique," Olivia said. "And he's cute."

Earlier Friday, Dewyze threw out the first pitch at Wrigley Field in Chicago before the Cubs played the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Dewyze is one of three contestants remaining on the Fox competition. The other two finalists—Crystal Bowersox of Toledo, Ohio, and Casey James of Cool, Texas—were also touring their hometowns.

Footage from the visits is scheduled to air on next week's show.

Baby girl for model Claudia Schiffer

LONDON (AP)—German supermodel Claudia Schiffer and her husband, British film producer and director Matthew Vaughn, have welcomed their third child - a baby girl.

A statement released Saturday by the couple announced the birth of their daughter but did not say what they intended to name her.

The baby was born in a central London hospital Friday afternoon. The statement says the 39-year-old model and the baby "are doing well."

Schiffer and Vaughn married in 2002. They already have a 7-year-old son, Caspar, and 5-year-old daughter, Clementine.

A heavily pregnant Schiffer was recently featured on the cover of German Vogue.

Police: TV chef cooked up murder-for-hire plot

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—A former television chef and Food Network host is under arrest in an alleged murder-for-hire plot involving homeless people, Santa Monica police said.

Juan-Carlos Cruz, one-time host of "Calorie Commando," was arrested Thursday and booked on suspicion of solicitation to commit murder, Sgt. Jay Trisler said. He's scheduled to be arraigned on Monday.

Homeless people told the city's homeless liaison officers that Cruz asked them to kill someone, Trisler said. They agreed to help police investigate the alleged murder-for-hire plot.

"They felt confident that they could divulge this information and be treated fairly and be listened to," he said.

Detectives discovered where, when and how the targeted individual was to be killed and how much money Cruz allegedly offered, Trisler said.

Police notified the intended victim, who was not identified publicly because of the ongoing investigation, he said.

In this undated photo provided by the Santa Monica Police Department, Juan-Carlos Cruz is shown.

Cruz, 48, is being held on $5 million bail. Trisler said his bail was raised because of information discovered during the investigation.

He did not know if Cruz had hired an attorney. Attempts to reach Cruz were not successful.

He was the pastry chef at Hotel Bel Air in Los Angeles, made custom wedding cakes and spoke about low-calorie cooking at health fairs, according to the biography on his book, "The Juan-Carlos Cruz Calorie Countdown Cookbook."

College-bound couple ready to give long-distance a try

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old high school senior who will be leaving for college soon. My boyfriend, also a senior, will be leaving, too. We have been going out for the past two years and trust each other completely. We attended different schools, so we are both fairly adapted to a "long-distance relationship."

The problem is I will be going to college in Florida while he will be staying in Michigan. Neither of us wants to break up, but we understand the enormous changes that will be taking place soon. I don't want to force any unnecessary stress upon him, and I know he feels the same. What are the chances of a long-distance relationship like this working out? Do you have any tips for maintaining it?

COLLEGE-BOUND

DEAR COLLEGE-BOUND: You are right that significant changes will take place after you and your boyfriend leave for college. You will both grow in different directions, which is a good thing and is to be expected. It will either enrich your relationship or end it. But if you have a strong friendship, are honest with each other and aren't afraid of letting each other enjoy some freedom, your chances are stronger of having a relationship that is long-lasting. It may seem counterintuitive, but it's true.

DEAR ABBY: In the past your column has been supportive of Overeaters Anonymous, a 12-step program for those suffering from compulsive eating. This year is the 50th birthday of OA. We want to remind people that they are not alone.

I have been a grateful recovery member of OA for eight years. Food is no longer my reason for living. I have been transformed by the program, both externally and internally. I want people to know there is help. Just as all heavy drinkers are not necessarily alcoholics, neither are all overeaters food addicts. But for those who are—and there are thousands—OA is the answer.

JANET IN TUCSON

DEAR JANET: My warmest congratulations to you, your fellow OA members and to Overeaters Anonymous on its golden anniversary year. When my mother first mentioned Overeaters Anonymous in this column in 1973, I am told the organization was inundated with 40,000 letters from readers wanting to know more or to start chapters. Today OA has grown to more than 6,500 chapters located in more than 75 countries. There is no shaming, no weighing, and no dues or fees are charged at the meetings. Chapters are located in almost every city, but if there's a problem in finding one, log onto www.oa.org or send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to OA World Service Office, P.O. Box 44020, Rio Rancho, N.M. 87174-4020.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of friends like the "Joneses," who tell us about all the different people they have had over for dinner and what was served, but have never invited us to share a meal even though we have had them to our house for dinner on more than one occasion?

STIFFED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR STIFFED: The people you have described are not acting like "friends." What they're doing shows extreme disregard for your feelings. When someone accepts an invitation to dinner in your home, anyone with good manners expects to reciprocate the hospitality in some way. If I were you, I would distance myself from the "Joneses." You'll have less hurt feelings and frustration if you do.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: Trent Reznor, 45; David Eigenberg, 46; Enya, 49; Bill Paxton, 55

Happy Birthday: Less worry and stress will equate to a more productive year, so get a handle on your finances. Strive for stability and security. Both are attainable if you buckle down and call the shots. It's time to take control and make things happen. It's your turn to excel. Your numbers are 3, 12, 19, 26, 27, 38, 44

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get into a key position and hold your ground. You stand a much better chance getting what you want if you take control. Work alone so you don't have to deal with people who are a liability. **

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Focus on friends, neighbors and relatives who may be in need of your help. Patience and tolerance may not come easy right now, but will be necessary if you want others to confide in you. What you find out will help you get ahead. ****

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't believe everything you hear and follow your intuition in emotional matters or affairs of the heart. Someone is likely to try to entice you to do things that don't suit your needs. Don't feel obligated to follow someone else's direction. ***

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid disappointment by doing things on your own. Someone is likely to pull out at the last minute, forcing you to make a fast decision. You mustn't miss out on what you want to do. Take action and don't look back. ***

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be feeling anxious but that's exactly when you should push and strive to accomplish whatever you have left unfinished. Your attitude and determination will get people's attention. Question whatever and whoever you don't agree with but don't push your beliefs on others. ***

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Chasing an impossible dream will not measure up in the end, but focusing on the moment and what you can make happen will bring you great satisfaction and the ability to see how far you can go. Master your skills and you will continue to advance. ****

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotions will get the better of you, causing costly personal and professional mistakes. Focus on how to make your money work harder for you. There is plenty to learn and the people you meet while doing so will influence your future. **

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Present and promote the things you have been working on, even if they aren't complete. You will gain confidence from the remarks you get and the help that is offered. A proposal is heading your way. *****

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Overindulgence and extravagance will work against you but, if you find a way to build your assets or add value to something you own or purchase, you will make gains. A little discipline will go a long way when dealing with projects and budgeting. ***

Lookin At Lucky wins Preakness, Super Saver fades

BALTIMORE (AP)—Change of jockeys, change of fortune.

Five years ago, Martin Garcia was working in a deli making sandwiches. He couldn't name even one of the Triple Crown races. But the 25-year-old jockey stole one of them Saturday, giving trainer Bob Baffert a Preakness win with a trouble-free ride.

Garcia beat veteran Calvin Borel, who had predicted a Triple Crown sweep after his colt Super Saver won the Kentucky Derby in the muck.

Baffert made a gutsy call between the two races, opting to take veteran Garrett Gomez off Lookin At Lucky, who was anything but in a series of mishaps in big races dating to last year.

"Our luck had to change somehow the way the trips have been," Baffert said.

The little-known jockey from Mexico proved to be up for the job aboard the bay colt in only his second Triple Crown race. Surprisingly, his toughest challenge didn't come from Super Saver. The colt faded to eighth as the 9-5 favorite in the 12-horse field.

"When I asked him, he kind of just folded up. It happens," said Borel, who didn't ride the rail this time - his signature trip.

Lookin At Lucky won by three quarters of a length over First Dude. Jackson Bend was another head back in third. The winner ran 1:36.16, giving Baffert his fifth Preakness victory, tying him with D. Wayne Lukas for second all-time.

It was the Hall of Famer's first Triple Crown win since 2002, when War Emblem won at Pimlico.

"When I saw those red colors making that cruise, I thought, 'Oh boy, he's running today,'" Baffert said.

Lucky's win means yet another year will pass without a Triple Crown champion. Affirmed was the last to sweep the Derby, Preakness and Belmont in 1978.

Lookin At Lucky paid $6.80, $4.60 and $3.80 as the 2-1 second choice. First Dude returned $16.60 and $9.20, while Jackson Bend paid $6.60 to show.

Yawanna Twist was fourth, followed by Dublin, Paddy O'Prado and Caracortado. Then came Super Saver, Schoolyard Dreams, Aikenite, Pleasant Prince and Northern Giant.

Things started to look up for Lucky on Wednesday, when he drew the No. 7 post. Super Saver wound up immediately to his outside.

"The draw was so important," Baffert said, and he turned out to be right.

Bad post positions were only part of his colt's misfortunes. When Baffert decided to dump Gomez for Garcia, he traded experience for enthusiasm. Before the race, Garcia kept thanking Baffert for the mount, and the trainer kept telling him to focus on the race.

"Even when I start riding, I don't even know what is Preakness, what is Kentucky, any race," Garcia said. "I just know that I need to go and ride a horse and win. I didn't know anything about big races."

But he knew enough to put his horse in all the right places around the racetrack.

At Churchill Downs, Lookin At Lucky was compromised by his starting position on the rail. He was immediately checked hard along the fence under Gomez, who also was aboard for rough rides in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile, Rebel Stakes and Santa Anita Derby.

Gomez's streak of bad rides continued aboard Lukas' Dublin, who broke poorly

Lincecum finally back in win column, beats Astros

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Tim Lincecum won for the first time in four starts and Juan Uribe hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning as the Giants beat Houston 2-1 on Saturday.

Lincecum (5-0) struck out five and walked five but outdueled Astros ace Roy Oswalt (2-5) in a rematch of hard-throwing righties from opening day.

Brian Wilson relieved Lincecum after the eighth and earned his eighth save in nine chances. But not before he loaded the bases and needed 15 pitches to retire Kaz Matsui on a game-ending flyout.

Lincecum earned his first win since April 23 following three straight no-decisions in which the two-time reigning NL Cy Young Award winner left with the lead.

Reds 4, Cardinals 3

At Cincinnati, Orlando Cabrera made a strong relay throw to the plate to nail Skip Schumaker for the final out, preserving Cincinnati's victory in baseball's Civil Rights Game.

Schumaker, who hit an RBI single to get St. Louis within one, tried to score when Joe Mather doubled to left. Rookie Chris Heisey, inserted for defensive purposes, got to the ball quickly when it died against the wall and threw to shortstop Cabrera, whose throw was to the foul side of the plate but fast enough for Ramon Hernandez to get over for the tag.

Dodgers 4, Padres 1

At San Diego, Clayton Kershaw threw seven strong innings against the first-place Padres in a victory that extended Los Angeles' winning streak to six.

James Loney homered and Russell Martin hit an RBI single for Los Angeles, which has won 11 of 14 and is two games above .500 for the first time this year. Garret Anderson had a run-scoring triple and Jamey Carroll an RBI single.

Kershaw (3-2) held the Padres to three hits, struck out seven and walked two. The left-hander started the Dodgers' winning streak last Sunday by beating Colorado 2-0.

Marlins 7, Mets 5

At Miami, Cameron Maybin equaled a career high with three RBIs as Florida earned its season-best third consecutive win.

The Marlins finished with 12 hits and had help from John Maine, whose first 12 pitches were balls. Maine (1-3) lasted five innings but gave up six runs, increasing his ERA to 6.13.

The Mets (18-19) fell below .500 for the first time since April 24 and matched their longest losing streak of the season with their fourth consecutive defeat.

Phillies 10, Brewers 6

At Milwaukee, Shane Victorino homered and drove in four runs, powering Philadelphia to the victory.

Staked to a 9-2 lead after Victorino's two-run drive in the sixth inning and Philadelphia's five runs off reliever Claudio Vargas in the seventh, Joe Blanton (1-2) and the Phillies' bullpen made it interesting.

Corey Hart's three-run shot in the seventh cut it to 9-5. Milwaukee pushed another run across in the ninth and loaded the bases, but 38-year-old Jose Contreras earned his first career save by striking out the final two batters.

Pirates 4, Cubs 3

At Chicago, Jeff Clement homered in the ninth inning and Octavio Dotel escaped a jam in the bottom half to lead Pittsburgh to the win.

Dotel walked Starlin Castro with one out and surrendered an RBI triple to Kosuke Fukudome. With Fukudome on third and the infield in, Dotel struck out Ryan Theriot and Marlon Byrd for his seventh save in nine opportunities.

Diamondbacks 11, Braves 1

At Atlanta, Justin Upton and Kelly

Johnson homered to help Arizona snap a seven-game losing streak.

Upton's sixth homer made it 1-0 in the first and his RBI triple in the fifth gave the Diamondbacks a 5-0 lead.

Rockies 6, Nationals 2, 1st game Rockies 4, Nationals 3, 2nd game

At Denver, Ian Desmond's throwing error in the seventh inning allowed Paul Phillips to score the go-ahead run, helping Colorado complete a doubleheader sweep.

Ubaldo Jimenez threw eight stellar innings for the Rockies in the opener, and Carlos Gonzalez and Seth Smith hit back-to-back homers in the second game.

Indians 8, Orioles 2

At Baltimore, Austin Kearns hit a go-ahead, three-run homer off Alfredo Simon in an eight-run ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians rallied for victory to end the Orioles' season-high three-game winning streak.

With one out and Baltimore ahead 2-0, Simon (0-1) allowed a single by Asdrubal Cabrera and walked Mark Grudzielanek. Shin-Soo Choo followed with an RBI single before Kearns slammed an 0-2 changeup to left for his third homer.

White Sox 5, Royals 4

At Kansas City, Jake Peavy settled down after a rocky first inning and pitched into the ninth to win his third straight start.

After the start was delayed 61 minutes by rain, Peavy (3-2) gave up a three-run double to Alberto Callaspo in the first inning and Billy Butler's homer in the third. But the right-hander allowed only three singles after that before he was pulled with one out in the ninth.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 0

At Toronto, Ricky Romero struck out 12 in his first career shutout and Jose from the 12th post and was not a factor.

Garcia kept Lookin At Lucky in the clear while running mid-pack down the backstretch, behind pacesetter First Dude. He made a big move on the final turn to challenge the surprisingly stubborn First Dude, a 23-1 long shot.

Racing on a dry track under sunny skies, Lookin At Lucky finally took charge in deep stretch.

Garcia came to the United States in 2003, working at a deli in the San Francisco Bay area. The owner introduced him to a former jockey, who got him a job as an exercise rider even though he had no experience.

Two years later he was a jockey, but continued cooking two days a week at the deli in a show of gratitude. He moved to Southern California a year later and found success on the ultra competitive circuit.

His most important new connection was Baffert.

"He came out here today and he was so cool and calm," the trainer said. "He rode a perfect race. Martin can get a horse to settle really well, and I could see he had the horse in a nice rhythm."

The race looked good for Super Saver, too, in the early stages.

Bautista hit two home runs.

Romero (4-1) allowed just five singles and walked one. The left-hander lowered his ERA to 2.88 and matched his career best for strikeouts while extending his unbeaten streak to five starts.

Rays 3, Mariners 2

At St. Petersburg, Florida, Willy Aybar homered leading off the bottom of the ninth inning, giving baseball-best Tampa Bay the victory.

The Rays wiped out a 2-0 deficit in the eighth inning, then won it with Aybar's drive to right-center on a 3-2 pitch from Jesus Colome (0-1).

Rafael Soriano (2-0) pitched a scoreless ninth in relief of James Shields to get the win.

Yankees 7, Twins 1

At New York, Andy Pettitte put to rest any concern about his left elbow, holding the Twins to two hits into the seventh inning.

Mark Teixeira and Jorge Posada hit long two-run homers in the seventh after stingy Francisco Liriano was done.

Pettitte (5-0) pitched 6 1-3 scoreless innings in his first outing in 10 days, winning his fifth consecutive decision to match his career-best start in 1997. He left his previous game May 5 with elbow inflammation and was forced to skip a start as a precaution.

Angels 12, Athletics 3

At Anaheim, Kendry Morales drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including a go-ahead shot off emergency starter Tyson Ross, as the Los Angeles Angels reached double digits in runs for the first time this season.

Ervin Santana (2-3) earned his first win since April 18, allowing three runs—two earned—and seven hits over six innings with six strikeouts and three walks. The right-hander is 11-2 with a 1.50 ERA in 18 career appearances against the A's, including 16 starts.

Ol' Celtics, or just old? Boston to show vs. Magic ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Plopped on the couch in his living room, Stan Van Gundy was watching Boston blow past Cleveland in the Eastern Conference semifinals and thought it was some sort of replay from the Celtics' 2008 NBA title run.

There were the familiar scenes: Kevin Garnett pounding his chest, Ray Allen swishing 3-pointers and Paul Pierce pumping his fist. Boston was winning, and winning big.

Orlando's coach was perplexed.

"If you look at them, that's the (same) team," Van Gundy said. "What would be the difference?"

These days, it might be hard to tell.

Turning back the clock to make another championship run, the resurgent Celtics are healthy again and looking to take down the playoff-perfect Orlando Magic starting Sunday in an Eastern Conference finals pitting the past two conference champions.

The Celtics, with 17 NBA titles and names such as Larry Bird and Bill Russell hanging from the rafters, want to add to their lore and prove that the bullies from Beantown are back. They'll have to do it against a favored Orlando team that's hungry to win its first NBA championship.

"Orlando was the team coming into the season where if you wanted to get out of the East, you had to beat Orlando," Celtics coach Doc Rivers said. "They're the team that won the East last year, not Cleveland, and I want to make sure our guys focus on that."

The motivated Magic, spurred by last year's NBA finals loss, swept through the first two rounds and have won 14 straight going back to the regular season. They eliminated the Celtics in seven games in the second round a year ago, and went 3-1 against Boston this year.

That might not mean much now.

Garnett, the centerpiece of Boston's last title, was out with a right knee injury in last year's playoffs and is now close to full strength for the first time since. Orlando's starting point guard, Jameer Nelson, also was sidelined with a tear in his right shoulder last season.

Add some fresh faces—headlined by Vince Carter for the Magic and Rasheed Wallace for the Celtics—and put a conference title at stake, and this year's series is getting a facelift.

"You're talking about pretty much

Boston Celtics' Kevin Garnett (5) and Kendrick Perkins, right, celebrate as Rajon Rondo (9) walks to the bench during a timeout late in the fourth quarter against the Cleveland Cavaliers in Game 6 in a second-round NBA basketball playoff series in Boston on Thursday, May 13, 2010.

Suns smirk at Jackson's 'traveling' accusation

PHOENIX (AP)—The Phoenix Suns have reacted with a collective smirk to Phil Jackson's suggestion that Steve Nash travels with the basketball.

Nash even had a subtle retort worthy of Jackson himself.

"It's news to me. I'm fortunate. I don't know if I've been called for a carry yet," he said after the Suns practiced Saturday, then he added straight-faced: "I've never heard anyone accuse me of carrying it. I mean, the best coach in the league Gregg Popovich (of San Antonio) didn't have a problem with it last week."

Get it? Popovich the best coach in the league?

"We have the best officials in the world," Nash continued. "I'll just leave it up to them."

Jackson had grinned when asked on Friday if it's tough for the Lakers to prepare to face Nash, the reigning NBA skills champion, because of the Suns guard's frenetic style.

"Yeah, because you can't carry the ball like he does in practice," Jackson said, making a gesture of palming the basketball. "You can't pick that ball up and run with it."

Phoenix coach Alvin Gentry laughed off the accusation.

"You guys got to admire Phil," Gentry said. "C'mon, the stuff that he throws out there, I mean I think it's great. He's very creative. There's a reason. But I think you've got to understand that there's kind of a method to his madness. If you let it affect you, then it will."

Gentry went on to praise Jackson for his ability to create championship chemistry on teams with great players, calling it "probably the toughest thing in the NBA to do."

He said the Suns weren't going to get drawn into what they consider Jackson's psychological ploy.

"How can we win that?" Gentry said. "We're not going to win that battle anyway."

But the Phoenix coach added a jab at the Lakers when he was asked jokingly if the team worked on ball handling skills.

"We spent the day ducking elbows on post-ups, to see if we could duck elbows on post-ups," Gentry said, a not-to-thinly veiled nod to the Lakers' style. "So it all works out, it all works out."

Amare Stoudemire probably spoke for the rest of the team with his reaction. "Typical Phil," he said.

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Jimmy Walker and James Nitties got on a roll, and the soaked Texas Open course dried out.

Next up is a long two-round finale.

Walker and Nitties shot 5-under 67s on Saturday for a share of the lead at 7 under with Brett Wetterich (68) and Matt Jones (71) at TPC San Antonio, where the Oaks Course soaked up a drenching that will make for a 36-hole finish Sunday.

Muck and mud squished under the morning gallery after more than 3 inches of rain washed out play Friday. But fairways drained and greens stayed firm, drawing praise from some in a field that has grumbled about the new Greg Norman-designed layout.

"The greens are what they are," said Wetterich, who birdied his final three

4-way tie for lead in Texas Open holes. "You're going to gripe about it, I think that's more advantage for other people that aren't and just kind of go with the flow."

Tour rookie Garth Mulroy (67) was a stroke back along with Charley Hoffman (70), James Driscoll (68), J.B. Holmes (70), Pat Perez (66), Tim Petrovic (68) and Aron Price (68). Ernie Els, a two-time winner this year, was two shots back at 5 under after a 67.

"Hoping for Texas winds tomorrow," Els said. "It's going to be a long day but I'll be up for it."

PGA Tour officials hadn't ruled out stretching the tournament into Monday if storms delayed the tournament again. The National Weather Service called for a 40 percent chance of rain Sunday.

Walker, who missed the cut in three of his last four tournaments since April, grabbed a share of the lead on a course he knows better than most.

The San Antonio resident played TPC San Antonio—where the Texas Open moved this spring after 15 years at La Cantera Golf Club—before most anyone last winter. That familiarity started paying off.

After starting the round four back, Walker birdied three holes on the front nine and another three on the back leg. He used a sand wedge to put a 111-yard approach about seven feet from the cup on the par-4 11th, then sank the putt for birdie.

"I've gotten way behind and it's hard to claw your way back from the back of the pack," Walker said. "I've been doing it but it's not fun. It's nice to get out and make the cut, you know, fairly easy."

Els also began a push. The current money and FedEx Cup points leader, who also is the only player in the field ranked in the top 10, missed the cut last week at The Players Championship while working through a bad swing.

Els arrived in Texas focused on releasing his club earlier and not being so "handsy through the hitting area." Though still feeling conservative with his drivers, Els was on target with his driver.

On the par-5 second, Els got out of a fairway bunker with a 5-iron before sinking a 17-footer for one of his five two different teams," Pierce said. "It should be an interesting matchup."

The roles are now reversed.

The Magic are the ones with home-court advantage, rolling past Atlanta and Charlotte in the opening rounds. They have peaked at the right time, winning 28 of their last 31 games, many in blowouts.

"I think for us if we want to win the series, we have to do all the things we did in the first two series," Orlando's Dwight Howard said. "And if we do that, we should win. We should win this series, but we all have to believe that and we have to understand that it's not going to be easy."

The Magic will have had six days between series and plenty of practices. They also had time to watch Boston take out LeBron James and the Cleveland Cavaliers with Garnett, who turns 34 next week, leading the way.

Too old to challenge for a title? The Magic don't believe it.

"There's no possible way somebody could have watched their 11 playoff games and think that age is any problem," Van Gundy said. "The only way people could say that is they literally could not have been watching the games."

"I think a lot of what people were calling slippage was health-related," he added. "All I know is what I'm watching, not only in the Cleveland series but the Miami series, does not look like a team on the decline."

Before the Magic eliminated the Celtics last season, the series was already being labeled with an asterisk: Garnett was out. It didn't matter much that Nelson wasn't playing.

Though the Magic don't know how a healthy Garnett would have affected last year's matchup, they know he'll be a factor come Sunday.

"It's hard to say," Magic forward Rashard Lewis said of last year. "I think it would have been a lot tougher. We beat them in seven. It's hard to say if we could have beat them without him, and we'll see if we can beat them this time with him."

So consider this a remix, with a few oldies added in.

That includes the Magic's biggest offseason acquisition, the 33-year-old Carter. He takes offense to any slights about age because, after all, he's in the same 1995 high school class as Garnett and Pierce.

birdies. He hit par on every other hole.

"I felt one more tournament could really do it for me, and although it didn't happen in the first round, I feel it's really coming around now," Els said.

Vijay Singh, who played with Els and is arguably the other biggest name in the tournament, shot for par in the second round and made the cut at 1 over. Sergio Garcia shot a 68 and was four strokes back.

Zach Johnson, the two-time defending tournament champion, couldn't erase the damage from his disastrous opening-round 80. He missed the cut at 4 over.

Johnson beat Driscoll in a sudden-death playoff at this tournament a year ago, and Driscoll on Saturday blew his chance for a five-way tie for first with a bogey on his final hole. His approach missed the green on the par-4 ninth, and his 8-foot putt for par missed by 2 feet.

FIELDERS

But in the top of the third, Manny Sablan put the Brewers right back in it with a towering homerun shot over the right field fence that also brought Ron Benavente home. It is worth mentioning that the wind was calm on Friday night and Sablan used a wooden stick to hit a real out-of-the-park home run which does not happen too often in this ballpark.

left a guy on base and failed to answer for a third time. At 4-4 to start the fifth, the Falcons added three runs to their lead and they would need it because the Twins’ offense finally came alive in the bottom half. The Twins loaded the bases off an error, a fielder’s choice, and a hit batsman that later set up a big two RBI double by P.J. Sablan. Darion Jones then singled in Sablan before the Falcons regained their grip. Although the Twins showed up with a late push, the game remained at 7-4 after a scoreless sixth inning. Notables of the game include the winning pitcher for the Falcons, Chris Sablan, who went five innings and allowed two earned runs with 10 strikeouts, three hits, three walks, and a hit-by-pitch as well. Twins Darion Jones also pitched a solid 5 2/3 innings and allowed two earned runs with 12 strikeouts, four hits, and a walk in a losing effort.

MCGRAW-HILL

The first half ended with McGraw-Hill still ahead by double-digits, 43-31, but not for long, as Shirley’s recovered in the third and moved within five, 47-52, entering the fourth canto. Aguon suited up for McGraw-Hill late in the second and started out in the third canto, but struggled with his outside shots, making only one triple. However, he and Mendiola found their rhythm in the fourth canto to prevent Shirley’s from taking the lead. Aguon had 12 points in the final quarter, firing two triples, while Mendiola chipped in eight. Shirley’s lost steam in the final canto, as it had only Fradel Sedillo making more than two

In the bottom half, John Reyes singled and scored off an error to give the Fielders a one-run lead after three.

In the top of the fourth, the Brewers kept plugging and got the run back from Mark Flores who knocked in Vince Cepeda.

But for some reason, the Fielders always seemed to stay one step ahead in this one and added two more runs to break the tie.

With two outs, Juan Maratita delivered a big two RBI single that brought home Wen-

Koblerville had another sweep in the 9 to 10 age group, earning 106 points in the girls competition and 138 in the boys. In the girls division, Koblerville topped Whispering Palms School (55 pts.) and Dandan Elementary School (39), while in the boys category, the Umangs won over WSR (71.50 pts.) and Whispering Palms (40 pts.)

Later in the top of the fifth, the stubborn Brewers would not go away and knotted up the score again.

Jess Mesa hit a two RBI single that brought in Benavente and Sablan, who reached off a walk and an error.

The Fielders came out and went 1-2-3 in the bottom half and the score remained even at 5-5 all the way until past the ninth inning where an unchar-group, Oleai Elementary School and Whispering Palms had a neck-and-neck battle for the championship with the Turtles collecting 59.50 points against the Terns’ 59. Points were given to teams based on how they finished in each event. In third place was WSR with 56 points. In the boys’ 11 to 12, WSR this time took the championships after recording 77 points.

In the top of the fourth, with the score at 6-2, Oscar Stafano, Jesse Brel, and Virolanson Secharmidal all came to the plate off two triples, a single and a couple of stolen bases.

While the Lions offense struggled on their side, the Aces offense was just on fire. They blow-torched through the last inning and added five more unanswered runs, which led to the mercy rule decision at 14-2, in five.

Survivors 7, Braves 3

The Survivors staged a last inning surge to eliminate the Braves and advance to the next round of the playoffs.

The visiting Braves got on the board first in the top of the third inning from J.J. Lifoifoi who scored off an error in center field after reaching with a single.

But the Survivors bested their effort with two runs of their own in the bottom half from a two-run homer by Caleb Takao with two outs. Takoa brought Jerry Kintol with him around the bases.

After both teams stranded a couple of runners in the fourth, the Braves tied the game in the top

The pitching and defense tightened up for both squads during the rest of this outing as runs became hard to come by.

The Brewers went 1-2-3 until the top of the ninth when they loaded up the bases just in time to leave them all stranded.

The Fielders stranded two runners in the sixth, one runner in both the seventh and eighth innings, and then left all of their runners stranded with Dandan Elementary School gained 66 markers for second pace, while Koblerville finished third with 50 points.

Delivering the first place wins for WSR in the boys’ 11 to 12 division were Alex Limes, Joseph Maratita, Wilfredo Francisco, and Quin Amog. In the girls’ 11 to 12, Oleai drew a gold medal from Jasmine Weilbacher (800m run) and a couple of

With the game even at 2-2, the Survivors’ top of the order dug deep and generated a big five-run inning in the bottom of the fifth to take a considerable lead late in this contest.

Truman Shiro led off and reached and scored off errors.

Takao scored off a couple of errors after drawing a one-out walk.

With two outs, Sullivan Kazau tripled in George Pangelinan who reached off an error.

Allen Cepeda came up next and drove in Kazau before going to third off an error and a wild pitch.

Joseph Seo drove in Cepeda before the Braves called Ian Norita to the mound in relief for starting pitcher, Franklin Lizama.

The Braves needed five runs to keep the game going, but only managed one as they fell short of the Survivors, 7-3.

Survivors winning pitcher Caleb Takoa went 5 2/3 innings and allowed two earned runs with seven strikeouts, five hits, and three walks. Takao also batted 1-for-1 with a two-run homer, two runs, and two walks.

Franklin Lizama went 4 2/3 innings with 11 strikeouts, three hits, and three walks in a losing effort.

Red Sox 11, Dragons 5

The visiting Red Sox manhandled the Dragons to make it through to the next round of the playoffs.

The Dragons simmered a couple of runs in each of the second and third innings and added one more, later in the sixth, but could not match the consistent offensive firepower that the Red Sox provided early on.

The Sox came out of the gate swinging with punches in bunches. They scored two in the first, three runs in the second, and then added four big

The umpire concurred and called Lisua out via a force out, which made the runner go back to second.

Ben Sablan then stepped into the box and belted a walk off double in remarkably similar fashion that officially brought in Ton Tenorio, who came in off the bench as a pinch runner for Rasa for the winning run.

With the late dramatic win, the Fielders forced a final Game 5 which will take place tonight at 6:30pm.

After three innings the score was 9-4 and neither team scored in the fourth or fifth innings.

In the top of the sixth, the Sox added two more to their lead from Jose Tyquiangco, who stole home, and Franco Nakamura, who scored off an error after both players reached via fielder’s choice.

The Dragons needed seven runs to take it to extra innings, but only managed one as they got burned by the Red Sox, 11-5.

The Red Sox did a great job of manufacturing their runs together as a team, but some standout notables included Jobe Reyes who batted 1-for-3 with a triple, two RBIs and to runs; Jhace Palacios who went 1-for-3 with two RBIs and a run; and Jonathon Camacho who batted 2-for-2 with two runs and two stolen bases.

The Week in Sports

Full week for sports

REPORTER

The sports community was busy as usual last week, having baseball, football, softball, basketball, and badminton games.

In baseball, the 2010 Saipan Major League continued its championship series with the Fielders notching two straight wins to tie their best-of-five title showdown against the Miller Lite Brewers. The Fielders last win came in Game 4 last Friday, 6-5, to force a rubber match tonight.

Still in baseball, the Saipan Little League Baseball had already completed the regular season of the Majors division and was in the last week of the elimination round in the Juniors, Seniors, and Big League divisions. The Majors playoffs began over the weekend.

In football, Northern Mariana Islands Football Association completed its festival for U14 division with Matansa Football Club and MP United Blue claiming the boys and girls championship, respectively.

Matansa topped MP United in the girls U 14 finals, 2-0, to notch its third straight title, while MP United Blue prevailed over Independents in the boys U14 finale, 2-0. Andrea Camacho scored twin goals for Matansa, while Jehn Joyner and Chris Park hit one each for MP United.

Perpetual trophies were awarded to the champion teams, while each player of the winning squads received miniature trophies. Boys' runner-up Independents and third placer Tan Holdings were awarded certificate. In the girls division, Paire finished third behind Matansa and MP United.

In softball, teams in the top half of the 21-squad field in the Chamolinian league posted wins that strengthened their playoff bid. Only the Top 10 teams will advance to the double-elimination playoffs and so far only Natibu (17-1), Island Rebels (16-2), Man Amigos (16-3), SaiPal (14-4), Chura (14-4), Ur Balls (13-6), and San Roque (12-6) are assured of slots to the next round. Five other teams are battling for the last three playoff berths.

In basketball, action in the Masters caging continued with IT&E and Shakir Realty remained the only unbeaten teams in the 16-squad league.

In the Shirley's caging, four teams had already advanced to the second round; Pacific Islands Club, Aqua Resort Club, McGraw-Hill, and AON/NJ Pro Plus. Booted out of the league were Bank of Guam, TBK Auto Shop, Shirley's, and Pepsi.

The Navy Hill caging also started its playoffs last week with Viel's and Lyn's BBQ eliminating Torch Bearers and Diamond, respectively.

In badminton, the 2010 IT&E Singles/Mixed Doubles Badminton Competition concluded with five more players being crowned champions.

Included on the list were Mario Diola, Choi Hannah, Chris Hilario, Rey Bulaon, and Merlie Tolentino. Diola won the men's B singles title and teamed up with Hannah in their title conquest of the mixed B doubles division. Hilario took the men's C singles plum, Bulaon claimed the men's A singles championships, while Tolentino won the women's C singles crown.

The Fielders held on to edge the Brewers, 6-5, and tied up the 2010 Saipan Major League championship series at 2-2 after Friday night's Game 4 showdown at Francisco "Tan Ko" Palacios Ballfield.

This game went back and forth as the Brewers were right on the Fielders' heels throughout the entirety of the game. The score built to a 5-5 tie and both teams would not back down until the Fielders finally made the Brewers blink in the 10th inning of play.

After a scoreless first inning, the Fielders stuffed the Brewers in the top of the second and took a two run lead in their bottom half.

Ryan Lisua came through with a two RBI triple with two outs that brought home Shane Mendiola and Jason Reyes who both reached earlier off errors.

McGraw-Hill and AON/NJ Pro Plus advanced to the next round of the 2nd Annual Shirley's Coffee Shop Invitational Basketball League eliminating separate opponents on Saturday at the JP Center Basketball Court.

The No. 8 McGraw-Hill was paired against the No. 9 Shirley's in the first round of the playoffs and won the weekend's first match, 90-79. In the second game, No. 10 AON pulled off an upset over Bank of Guam, 104-99.

McGraw-Hill is now in the quarterfinals and will face defending champion and No. 1 seed Micronesian Broker, Inc. tonight. AON's quarterfinal's foe tonight will be the second-ranked World Resort/Advance.

Peter Mendiola paced McGraw-Hill with 28 points, while gunner Rufino Aguon came off the bench and chipped in 15. Mendiola and Aguon hit timely baskets in the fourth quarter, foiling Shirley's repeated comeback bids.

After trailing in the first period, 19-21, McGraw-Hill picked up its pace in the second to grab the driver's seat and lead by as much as 14, 39-25.
